PROFESSOR SNOOK admits that he "hammered Miss Theora Hix until she was unconscious, then cut her throat to end her suffering."

His defence will be that the lady induced him to take drugs, which made him kill her. In fact, she was responsible for her own murder.

The woman tempted me, and I did eat, is an excuse that has been used in every age and every court.

Mussolini Removes Belloni From Office and Arrests His Advisers

Associated Press Cable

ROME, Aug. 3.—Italy reverberated today with its greatest public scandal in years, involving Ernest O. Belloni, former mayor of Milan and Italian financial expert of Versailles and the reparations and debt conferences, and unnamed advisers.

Belloni was removed summarily late yesterday by Premier Mussolini from all public and political activity and various of his advisers, whose identity has not been made known, were imprisoned. The action followed reports of a special committee into Belloni's activities as podesta (mayor) of Milan.

The charges provoking the investigation were levelled by Roberto Far-

All Going Well on Big Dirigible Passengers Report—Even the Gorilla is Enjoying Trip—Air Liner in Touch With Washington

Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3—The nevy department today received a radiogram from the Graf Zeppelin, which said that at 4 a.m., E.S.T., the dirigible was 425 miles southwest of Fayal, Azores and 1,750 miles from Lakehurst, due east of the Virginia Capes.

If the airship maintains the same speed all the way to Lakehurst it was estimated here that she would not arrive until early Monday morning.

This speed during the night, which was approximately fifty knots, was far below her maximum cruising speed.

The message to the navy department gave the dirigible's position as 36.20 north, and 37.20 west, and reported "all O.K."

Will Arrest Stowaway

GIBRALTAR, Aug. 3—The stowaway who jumped aboard the Graf Zeppelin as she was leaving her hangar Thursday morning is anything but a hero to Dr. Hugo Eckener, the ship's commander, and will find himself in the hands of the authorities as soon as the air liner reaches port.

A wireless message picked up here from the Zeppelin said that the stowaway was being held a prisoner in the crew quarters and would be turned over to the Lakehurst port authorities. Dr. Eckener holds that he had endangered the lives of the passengers and the ship's safety by jumping on the Zeppelin's envelope in getting aboard.

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 3.—The position of the Graf Zeppelin at 8 a.m., G.M.T. (3 a.m. E.S.T.), today was about 500 miles west and slightly south of the Azores. The airship was making up time again and

BANK MANAGER ROBBED BY A LONE BANDIT

Robber Gets Away With $1,300 From Manager of Weyburn Institution

Canadian Press

BENGOUGH, Sask., Aug. 3—R. H. Jackson, manager of the Weyburn Security Bank of Big Beaver, was robbed Friday morning of $1,300 by a lone bandit at Buffalo Gap where he had gone to open a branch. He had left the money in his car while he went to open the bank where he was confronted by the robber who held a gun to his head and compelled him to tell where the money was.

Mounted police immediately set out on the chase. Authorities in North Dakota were asked to keep a sharp watch as the man was making for the border when last seen.

Mr. Jackson described the robber as of average height, garbed in dark overalls. His face had been blackened with burnt cork.

Bandit Car Found

Shortly before eleven o'clock Friday night information was received from Big Beaver that the car, in which the bandit escaped had been found eight miles north of Big Beaver. The car was abandoned on a lonely trail and set at rest the theory expressed earlier in the day that the gunman had an accomplice waiting for him in another car.

The finding of the car further adds to the opinion that the gunman may be a resident of the district, or at least familiar with the custom of Manager Jackson and his visits to Buffalo Gap every Friday.

MANCHESTER, Aug. 3—The first week of the cotton industry stoppage ends today, with indications that additional numbers will be added to the idle rather than an early peace obtained.

HOCKEY STAR DIES A HERO

Cast Off From Swamped Canoe to Allow Companions to Save Lives

Canadian Press

GOGAMA, Ontario, Aug. 3—George "Shorty" Horne, Toronto professional hockey star, who was drowned near here Thursday, died the death of a hero, say his companions Jack Jessup, Victor Pernu and Jack Stafford, according to the story told by the survivors of the accident caused by the swamping of the canoe in which they were travelling. Horne cast off from the upturned canoe when he saw that it could not carry four men. He started off confident in his swimming prowess. Pernu saw him go down beneath the choppy waves.

Tearing off their clothes, the other men succeeded in reaching the shore. Jessup and Stafford clinging to the canoe and Pernu swimming the course in which Horne had failed. Then, barefoot and nude, they dragged their canoe over swamp and portage seven miles to the Rice Lake Fur Company's post, where they arrived in an exhausted condition, their bodies scratched by the branches and feet bruised by the journey over the rough land.

Pernu, in following Horne, searched for him until he was exhausted but could find no trace of his companion.

The Horne party was on Sakatawichtam Lake, south of Stack Pool, when a northwest gale sprang up and wrecked their craft about a mile from shore.

Stafford, who is noted for his strong physique, and Jessup, expert canoeist and guide, were boyhood friends of Horne and were associated with him in a group of mining claims in Genoa township, where they were going to do assessment work.

CHINESE SAY REDS ATTACK AMUR VESSEL

Two Passengers Killed and Two Wounded, Despatches Allege

Associated Press Cable

TOKIO, Aug. 3.—Rengo News despatches from Harbin state that according to Chinese official sources two Chinese passengers were killed and two wounded in a Russian attack on a Chinese steamer in the Amur river. The steamer was captured.

The same Chinese sources say 150 Chinese were captured by Russians on Chinese vessels near the mouth of the Sungari river. These prisoners are alleged to have been held at Blagoveschensk and after their release valuables belonging to them were retained. It is charged that 450 other captives similarly seized by the Russians, including 86 White Russians, still are imprisoned in Amur City.

NEW DUTY ON FLAXSEED TO HURT CANADA

Practically All 1928 Flaxseed Export Went to U. S.—Potatoes up Too

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Aug. 3.—Approval by the Republicans in the United States senate finance committee of the proposed duty of 35 cents a hundredweight on potatoes and their willingness to put shingles back on the free list are perhaps the most important to Canada of the items in the report so far.

Canada exported to the United States during the last fiscal year potatoes to the value of $1,140,731 and the year before $4,593,441, while imports totalled $539,803 in 1928.

The understanding here is that the new impost on Canadian potatoes will apply both to potatoes meant for seed and those for table use.

The increased duty against flax seed from 40 cents to 56 cents will have an adverse effect on flax growing in Canada. In 1928 flax seed worth $5,740,716 out of a total export of $5,745,397 went to the United States.

Putting shingles back on the free list means much to this country. Last year Canada shipped to the United States shingles valued at $7,663,419. Canada also sold the United States last year three millions worth of birch and maple.

Increases in duty on oats from 15 to 16 cents a bushel does not affect Canada which last year sold the United States only $22,611 worth of the grain.

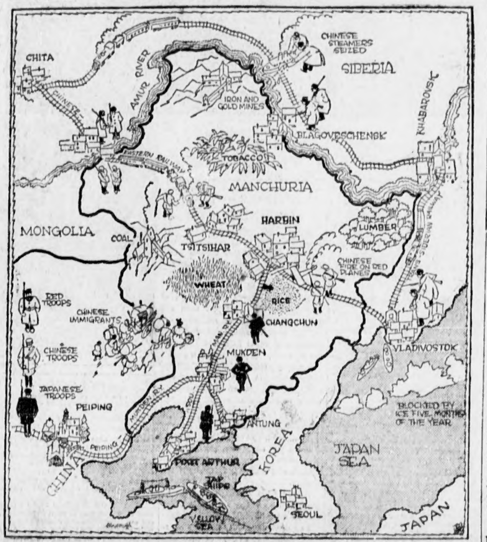
Sketch Map Of Trouble Centre



This sketch map, drawn by Artist Joe King, depicts the situation in Manchuria, where Russia and China are at swords' points over the seizure by the latter country of the Chinese Eastern railway. This railroad, connecting the Siberian town of Chita with Russia's oriental port of Vladivostok, eliminates a long haul around the northern border of Manchuria and is consequently of great importance to the Russians. Red troops (depicted in long coats and black caps) are massed near Chita on the border, at Blagoveschenk and at Vladivostok, and have seized a number of Chinese steamers on the Amur river. Chinese troops, having seized the Chinese Eastern railway, are guarding its entire length, and have fired on Russian planes near the eastern border. The Japanese army, in turn (shown in black uniforms), holds the Southern Manchuria railway, running from the town of Changchun to the Japanese-controlled port of Port Arthur, and Japanese warships are stationed at the latter harbor. Since Vladivostok is blocked by ice five months out of every year, Russia is anxious to be able to export goods across Manchuria, via Harbin, to Port Arthur. Manchuria is rich in gold, iron and coal mines, has extensive forests and raises huge crops of wheat, rice and tobacco, and has been getting immigrants from China at the rate of 1,000,000 a year.

REGINA FLIER DIES IN CRASH; FALLS 300 FEET

Dale Blount Victim of Accident at Exhibition at Hughton, Sask.

Canadian Press

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 3—Dale Blount, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Blount, 2120 Angus street, holder of a private license for flying, was instantly killed in an aeroplane crash at Hughton, at 5.45 o'clock Friday afternoon. Blount had taken the plane, the monocoupe Cfaga for a short flight, and had risen to about 300 feet, when suddenly the machine nose dived and when Mr. Rice reached the wreckage he found his brother pilot dead.

Word reached the city concerning the fatality within a short time after the accident, information being obtained from Jess Rice, licensed pilot of the Aviation Schools, Ltd.

Rice, accompanied by Blount left Regina at ten o'clock Friday morning for Hughton, where the former was to do commercial flying at the fair, and Blount was to sell tickets.

For the first part of the afternoon business was good, and the plane behaved wonderfully well according to Mr. Rice. About 5.40 o'clock during a lull when Rice was resting, Blount went up alone in the machine and it is believed at a height of 300 feet the engine suddenly ceased to function causing the machine to dive to the ground.

Dale Blount was born at Halbrite, Sask., 22 years ago, and after completing school, went to the United States where he first learned to fly. Afterwards he came to Regina to reside.

British-Russian Hitch Is Due To Procedure Method

Associated Press Cable

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The hitch in the British-Russian negotiations for resumption of diplomatic relations was said in official quarters today to have arisen over the question of procedure and not on policy.

Rumors that the departure of M. Dovgalevsky, Russian ambassador in Paris, and Russian representative in the negotiations, were connected with unpleasantness in his discussions with Right Hon. Arthur Henderson, foreign secretary, were denied emphatically.

Misunderstanding as to the nature and scope of the initial conference is believed, in well infromed circles, to have been the cause for suspension of the discussions. It is known that the questions of propaganda and Russian debts were not broached.

The next move in the effort to renew normal relations between the countries is expected to come from Moscow.

NEWPORT, R.I., Aug. 3—Theodore R. Pell played golf with a tennis racquet here against Harry Paine Bingham, who used golf clubs, and when the score for nine holes was reckoned, Pell had lost by only two strokes.

The strange contest grew out of a discussion the two had earlier in the week. Pell said he would be able to defeat Bingham by using the tennis racquet for every stroke except putts. He used a mashie on the greens.

Pell's drives often were better than 200 yards. He shot a 42 against Bingham's 40.

"LIFER" GIVES SOUND ADVICE TO THE WORLD

Narrowly Escaping Gallows Slayer Urges Youth to "Go Straight"

Canadian Press

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 3.—On his way from Toronto to Portsmouth penitentiary, where he began a life sentence Friday, William Barclay, slayer of Nancy Hudson last New Year's eve, gave his "advice to the world" through newspaper men who accompanied Barclay and his guards on the train.

"Go straight," Barclay said. "Keep away from liquor—and women, too. If you are married, stay with your family. That's my advice to the world."

Barclay, whose death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment 24 hours before he was to be led to the scaffold, is a grandfather. His wife and three children, including a married daughter 20 years, as well as his mother and two brothers, are in Scotland. He said he had not seen his wife for six years.

Asked if his mother knew of his conviction, Barclay's lips quivered and his hands fumbled nervously. "I don't think so," he said. "She had not heard the last time I heard from her, and never will if I can help it."

RAIN DROWNS FOREST FIRES IN MANITOBA

Alberta Situation is Still Reported as Most Acute —Ontario Improved

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Aug. 3.—Forest fires in northwestern Ontario and eastern Manitoba are believed to be definitely checked this morning after a night of steady rain which spread over the entire flame-stricken area. While reports from Kenora district were meagre, weather officials declared that a rainfall lasting about 10 hours and continuing today was experienced from the head of the lakes to many miles east—covering the whole forest fire district.

Port Arthur and Fort William reported showers that lasted four and one half hours last night. The fire menace was almost completely obliterated in that vicinity. If the steady downpour in other sections did not altogether stamp out the fires, it was believed they would certainly be well under control of the fire rangers, who with volunteer forces, had fought for days to keep them checked.

Alberta Hit

In the dried-out bush lands of Alberta, drought swept for many weeks, the situation was most acute, while there was little change reported in the Thunder Bay and Kenora-Rainy River districts of Northwestern Ontario. In Northwestern Ontario many fires still were blazing, but the great danger had passed, with hundreds of volunteers and forest rangers, successful in their five day battle against the menace of the forest.

Spreading into new territory, the greatest fires in a decade are taking heavy toll of valuable timber stands in the Coalspur mining area of Alberta, where the picturesque Brazeau park, a government reserve, is now a flaming mass. Some of the most beautiful scenes of the Brazeau reserve, Friday night are a blackened waste, despite the efforts of weary foresters and volunteers, called from the mines.

POLICE HUNT OTTAWA GIRL

Investigating Disappearance Irene Lamont, Believed Drowned

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Aug. 3—The Quebec provincial police will immediately start an investigation of the disappearance of Miss Irene Lamont, 27-year-old Ottawa girl, believed drowned in Houder's lake, near Buckingham, Quebec, on July 25, but whose body has not been recovered.

Word to this effect from Charles Lanctot, deputy attorney general of Quebec, was received by C. A. Lamont, father of the missing girl. It is presumed two provincial detectives will be sent to the Buckingham district from Montreal.

The information that an official probe of the Houder's lake tragedy in which Mrs. J. J. Hisgrove, of Ottawa, her nine year-old son Denis, and Miss Mamie Taeger, of Hull, lost their lives by drowning near the cottages they occupied, with Miss Lamont came as a relief to the Lamont family. Only Thursday night word had come from Buckingham that the search of both the lake and the bordering woods has continued unceasingly for a week.

The remains of Mrs. Hisgrove, her son and Miss Taeger, were recovered from the water. Although it is presumed Miss Lamont also lost her life while bathing, the fact that her wearing apparel was not found with that of her companions, led to the belief she might have become unnerved after witnessing the drowning, run into the bush and become lost.

50,000 Boy Scouts at World Jamboree Cheer Wildly for Prince of Wales

MUD AND RAIN DO NOT QUENCH ARDOR OF BOYS

H.R.H. Receives Gifts and Cheers as he Inspects Mammoth Scout Camp

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Correspondent

ARROWE PARK, England, August 3.—Almost the earliest riser of all the 50,000 scouts encamped here Friday was the Prince of Wales. The Prince arrived Thursday night for a visit to the great boy scout jamboree at which some 52 nations are represented.

It was a night of rain and wind but soon after six o'clock His Royal Highness took his bath in his tent adjoining that of the Chief Scout, Sir Robert Baden-Powell, and had a simple breakfast with Sir Robert. The Prince then inspected the Scouts of Wellington College, who had guarded his tent during the night and with the chief scout began a four hour tour of the camp.

Too Much Eats

They called first at the isolation hospital where they saw a few patients suffering from gastritis or, in other words, stomach ache, caused by unwise eating and others who had slight injuries such as gathered teeth. The Prince's brown boots and shorts were soon liberally bespattered with mud, although the sun shone brightly during his nine mile walk.

When he passed the cooking camps the cooks left the bacon to burn and rushed out to cheer him. At one point a boy was brought by the chief scout from a potato paring fatigue. "This is my son, Peter," said Sir Robert. The Prince shook hands with young Baden-Powell in the left hand scout fashion.

On his visit to the Irish Free State camp, commander Childs, the oldest scout, asked His Royal Highness to accept a black thorn shillelagh. "Thanks, awfully. I should like to have it," replied the Prince, who flourished it as he passed to the Welsh camp.

Canadian Cheers

The scouts from Canada received the Royal visitor with as wild a whoop as any in the camp, as he paused a while to exchange a word with those in command. There are some 150 Canadian scouts at the Jamboree, representative of all parts of the country.

It was a pathetic incident when the Prince was going by a party of deaf and dumb scouts, who waved their hats on their staves and made him understand how deep was their regard for him. The blind scouts also pressed forward in a crowd at another point.

In the afternoon, with a great gathering of ambassadors and ministers, the Prince witnessed a pageant similar to that given before the Duke of Connaught on Wednesday.

Message From King

The Prince then read a message from the king:

"This is a unique assembly of youth of all the great nations of the world and I ask them to remember it is chiefly upon the coming generation that the future peace of the world depends."

Cables by the hundred are pouring in upon Sir Robert Baden-Powell, from all parts of the world, congratulating him on his honor.

Graft Alleged

Farinacci claimed Belloni favored the United States banking firm of Dillon, Read and company, in return for a large money compensation, in allotting a loan of $30,000,000 to the city of Milan in 1927.

The committee, although still investigating the loan, exonerated Belloni on this charge, but found he had used his office as podesta to increase greatly his private fortune.

Farinacci himself was subpected to a scathing criticism by Premier Mussolini, who said: "The Fascist government deplores in most forceful manner the action of Attorney Farinacci, deputy in parliament and member of the grand council, for having brought publicity and grave defamatory accusations touching directly the Fascist party and a great banking institution of the United States.

"These accusations, which the committee has ascertained are wholly without foundation, have furnished the means for comments to damage the kingdom."

Both Belloni and Farinacci have been been among the most eminent members of the Fascist party.

Bennett Silent On Plan To Buy Sir John's Home

Canadian Press

PARKSVILE, B.C., Aug. 3.—Hon. R. B. Bennett, opposition chieftain, declined to make any comment on the suggestion that the old residence of Sir John A. MacDonald, "Earnscliffe," Ottawa, might be purchased as the permanent home in the capital for the Dominion leader of the Conservative party.

"I have really nothing to say," Mr. Bennett stated when approached on the matter.

Following the election of Mr. Bennett at the Winnipeg conference of 1927 to lead his party in the Dominion parliament area, a suggestion was made for the acquisition of the former residence of Sir John as a permanent home in Ottawa for the leader of the Conservative party. No action was taken in the matter, however, but the death on Wednesday of the owner of the premises, Dr. Chas A. E. Harriss, nationally known musician, has revived the report.

Illinois Boxing Body Is Removed

Associated Press

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Illinois boxing affairs will be administered after August 10 by a group other than that composed by Paul Prehn, Sam Luzzo and Al Mann.

Governor Louis Emmerson yesterday requested the resignation of the present Illinois State Athletic Commission with the brief comment that such a change "would undoubtedly be for the best interest of boxing in Illinois."

The action came just before the Sammy Mandell-Canzoneri lightweight championship fight last night, and circumstances in connection with distribution of tickets for the fight were believed to have been largely responsible.

Lethbridge Farmer Reports Fine Yield — Cutting in West Starts Next Week

Canadian Press

LETHBRIDGE, Aug. 3.—Combined winter wheat on the farm of A. M. Henry, eight miles east of Lethbridge, is yielding at the rate of 36 bushels to the acre. It weighs 64 pounds to the bushel, and though it has not been graded as yet, promises to be the highest grade of Alberta red winter. Swathing started on the field last Thursday and, following the intense heat over the week-end, the swathed wheat was fit to combine on Wednesday. Winter wheat cutting is general over Southern Alberta, and yields of 30 to 50 bushels per acre are promised.

PREMIER AND PARTY MAKING GOOD PROGRESS

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

SEXSMITH, Alta., Aug. 3.—Premier Brownlee and Dr. R. C. Wallace president of the University of Alberta, arrived at Sexsmith Thursday midnight and continued their trip Friday to Fairview, spoke at Debolt on Tuesday and at the U.F.A. picnic, Beaver Lodge, Wednesday. The Premier, speaking on co-operative marketing, said no area in Alberta equal in size to Grande Prairie compared with its crops. The remarkable growth and development of district new settlers, he said, will supply sufficient labor for harvest.

The party also visited Pouce Coupe and Hythe, covering nearly all the Grande Prairie district. R. J. Dinning and Hugh Allen, M.L.A., in party.

At Rolla, B.C.

ROLLA, B.C., Aug. 3.—Premier Brownlee visited Rolla Thursday with the following party: Dr. R. C. Wallace, president of University of Alberta; J. W. Sawyer, secretary of Grande Prairie U.F.A.; I. V. Macklin, director of U.F.A. for Peace River country; R. J. Dinning, liquor control commissioner of Alberta; J. M. Imrie, of Edmonton; Hugh Allen, member for Grande Prairie district; M. H. Morrell, B.C. government agent of Pouce Coupe; and Sergt. Greenwood of the provincial police.

They were met at Rolla by I. D. Vandewater, for the Rolla Board of Trade, and L. G. Taylor, of the Bulletin. Lunch was served at the Columbia hotel, and the party next took an automobile trip to the Alberta-B.C. boundary. The Premier was especially interested in the condition of the present railroad grade from Spirit River to the B.C. boundary and the possible cost of putting it in good shape. He also took interest in the amount of settlers and quality of crops along this grade. He also noticed specially the lack of educational facilities for Alberta children west of the Pouce Coupe river in Alberta. He considered the crop situation in the district to be excellent. The party left Rolla for Sexsmith after a stay of three hours.

POUCE COUPE, B.C., Aug. 3.—Premier Brownlee of Alberta and party passed through here Friday and made a complete tour of the whole Pouce Coupe district, lunching at Rolla en route. The party then returned to Alberta, being escorted throughout the district by the Pouce Coupe Chamber of Commerce.

McCallum Faces Court On Wild Driving Charge

William McCallum, 20, object of police search since June 15, and arrested by Alberta provincial police in Calgary, Thursday, appeared before Magistrate Colonel McLeod on a charge of reckless driving, Saturday morning. The case was adjourned until Thursday.

The charge was an aftermath of an accident at 96th street and 103rd avenue, when a car, allegedly driven by McCallum at a furious rate of speed, collided with another. Dave Gaucher, a passenger in McCallum's auto, was seriously injured.

McCallum was also injured, but on his discharge from the hospital he disappeared from the city and has been sought by the police since that time.

estimated yield for this country and Canada is 486,000,000 bushels under last year's crop.

The government plans a giant co-operative world-wide marketing organization, with $20,000,000 back of it. The farm board and smaller agricultural co-operatives would work together, and Uncle Sam would supply the capital.

A serious effort to help the farmers is important to everybody. General prosperity depends on the farmers' ability to buy manufactured products.

THE Mayor of New York says he cannot permit taxicabs with radios. The noise might distract the driver's attention. Also, it would add to street noises. It might drown out the worst of them to have taxis singing or playing radio jazz on every block.

But the mayor's decision rules. Thousands of private individuals will install automobile radios, for the average American wants to be quite sure that he will never have too much time for thought.

By the way, Mr. E. S. Gorrell, president of the Stutz Motor Company, would like you to know that his was the first company to install automobile radios. Anybody with a prior claim please communicate with Mr. Gorrell.

CHICAGO gangsters, running the "dog race racket," the fools that bet on races, and the public generally ask this question:

Why is it legal to race, and bet on animals with four legs and hoofs, and illegal to bet on racing dogs that have no hoofs?

Such is the Chicago ruling. Horses may race and men may bet on them. Dogs must not race; no gambling on them allowed.

The speed of horses is no longer important, since automobiles have arrived. The speed of dogs might, conceivably, have some importance in hunting or chasing criminals.

But utility has nothing to do with it. Eminently respectable and prosperous gentlemen like to breed racehorses. Racing and gambling are necessary, to pay expenses. With no gambling, the tracks would be deserted.

The racketeers say justice is outraged, and propose to attract public attention to their woes, with the aid of a few bombs.

Lamont Exhibition Draws Big Crowds

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

LAMONT, Alta., Aug. 3.—The second day of the Lamont Exhibition, held August 1, proved to be another success. The crowd was not quite as large as on the first day.

The features of this day were the sports. Foot races, horse races and various other sports were all disposed of during the day in fine style. Some very well nown athletes from different parts of Alberta came to compete in the various events. Liberal prizes were given in each case. The open class horse race was the laugh of the racing events, and the young riders, when not falling off the horses, seemingly set their track all over the grounds. After several attempts to get the horses going straight, the prizes were finally given to two local lads.

The baseball game honors went to Bruderheim, who played excellent ball.

Eddie Karey of Andrew was the umpire of the two-days' games.

A basketball game played between the Chipman girls and the Lamont boys ended in victory for the latter by a score of 22 to 24.

ers two hundred men are battling the flames, while others are handling pack trains taking food and equipment to the hard pressed fire-fighters.

Weeks of drought have dried out the forest areas, and only the coming of heavy rains will relieve the serious situation.

Fires in the forest 40 miles southwest of Calgary have been brought under control after several days of battle, and although there was no rain today, cooler weather relieved the situation somewhat.

Uphill Battle

Rangers fighting the fires sweeping through the Brazeau Dominion Forest Reserve continued their uphill battle against both flames and wind on Friday, and by nightfall had again dug themselves in in deep fire trenches and kept the blaze from making further headway, according to information obtained by the Bulletin over the long distance telephone from Forest Supervisor G. E. White of Coalspur.

Friday was a great day for the rangers.

The fire, after breaking through the firelines on Thursday and sweeping across the Cardinal river, touched new timber and, fanned by a high wind, appeared to be set for a great drive southeast. Undaunted, the rangers, tired from a week's strenuous fighting, again threw themselves the fray and battled all day long to into the fray and battled all day to had been accomplished.

Work All Night

All Friday night the rangers mustered their forces and reconnoitered the situation.

Early Saturday morning they struck in counter-attack and, taking advantage of overcast skies and a lull in the wind, advanced to close grips with the flames and actually commenced extinguishing them. As a result of this great stroke the major fire, now being fought by a force of 260 men, has been brought well in hand and, unless fanned by a new wind storm, will be kept under control.

The skies which have promised rain for the last several days have not yet fulfilled that promise, but all through the area there was every indication of a heavy downpour.

Second Fire

The second fire which broke out on the reserve about eight miles from the main one is not yet under control, despite the mighty efforts of a large fighting force. More men and further supplies will be rushed to this blaze, and it is believed that it will be soon brought under control.

Still another fire, which has been burning some distance to the east of the Brazeau reserve for the last week is still unchecked. Mr. White sent three men to investigate it on Monday last, but so far they have made no report. The journey is of 44 miles through difficult territory and they may be detained for a variety of reasons.

Fires continue to rage elsewhere in the west.

Force Increased

The fire at the junction of the Elbow river and Rainy Creek, 40 miles south of Calgary, has not yet been brought under control and the fighting force has been increased from 40 to 50 men.

A forest fire on the Big Horn reserve, south of Sheep Creek is now under control and a fire in the Burnt Stick Lake area, near Red Deer, is being investigated. Additional lookout parties have been established and every precaution is being taken against fresh outbreaks.

A large fire has broken out in the vicinity of Horn Lake, on Vancouver Island and while being fought by a large number of men, has not yet been brought under control. Other fires on the coast are well in hand.

Rain has commenced falling in the Fort William area and the situation there is considered satisfactory.

had pushed up the motors to a speed of 115 kilometres an hour.

The correspondent gave the speed of the zeppelin on her long, steady rush across the Atlantic from the Azores as 45 miles an hour. Part of the text of his message was slightly garbled in transmission.

The time was given as 1 a.m. Saturday, G.M.T. (8 p.m. Friday, E.S.T.). Her position was then west and south of Pico Islands in the Azores.

The correspondent found the German passengers blase. Everyone was dying for a smoke and found the idea almost unbearable that people could smoke elsewhere in the world.

Talks To Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3. — The Reading Company announced today that its high frequency receiving set was in touch with the Graf Zeppelin at 2:45 a.m., E.D.T., when the ship gave her position as 39.30 west and 26.20 north.

Washington Can't Hear Her

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The navy department has been unable to get in touch with the Graf Zeppelin since shortly before eight o'clock, eastern standard time, last night.

After repeated attempts to make contact early today, a weather report was broadcast about 4 a.m. with the hope that the big ship would pick it up.

Faint signals were heard, but the operators here could not be sure whether they came from the Zeppelin.

The report last night gave her position at 7:05 p.m., eastern standard time, as 90 miles south of Pico, Azores. She had slowed down to a speed of 45 knots.

EVERYBODY HAPPY ABOARD AIR LINER

By HERBERT S. SIEBEL
Special Correspondent of the Associated Press

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 3.—As we near the end of our second day together, it has become increasingly certain that this is the most congenial crowd ever assembled in a ship, either in water or in the air.

While the world is anxious and wondering about us, we are singing and telling stories and having a good time, not at all in a hurry to reach New York. Even the gorilla seems to have entered the spirit of the thing and seems to insist on haying company all of the time. She is quite affectionate.

It has been sunny part of the time. The ship has behaved fine.

When we passed over Santa Maria island at 8:20 last night (3:20 p.m. E.S.T.), we dropped two bundles of mail wrapped in a German flag. The sea was very calm.

Due Sunday Afternoon

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin does not expect to reach New York before Sunday afternoon, declares a special despatch received here this morning from the Ullstein news agency correspondent aboard the dirigible.

Stowaway Is Prisoner

BERLIN, Germany, August 3. — Conflicting reports current as to whether a stowaway was aboard the Graf Zeppelin was explained here on the theory, Dr. Eckener did not wish to make a hero of the man who so endangered the lives of passengers and crew. Hence it was so little was said about him. He was believed here to be a prisoner aboard the ship.

Talking to U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The Graf Zeppelin has established contact with the new world.

The first direct message from the airship was received by the navy department in Washington, and said that at 7:05 p.m. E.S.T., the ship was 90 miles south of Pico, Fayal, Azores. It was moving northeastward at about 52 miles an hour. The Zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen, a short time before, had reported that what few messages were sent by the radio operator on the dirigible could be heard, but were barely distinguishable.

Horta, capital of the island group, described the disappointment of residents that the giant airship had not flown over that point.

The Azores represent the last outpost of Europe and Africa and the first landfall of the air travellers unless storms cause them to fly by way of the Bermudas, is almost certain to be the American mainland, sometime on Sunday. Dr. Eckener had estimated the duration of his flight at between 80 and 85 hours.

As the ship swung out beyond the Azores it passed the half way mark of its flight. It was then about 2 500 miles from Friedrichshafen, which it had covered in 45 hours and a half or at an average speed of about 56 miles an hour.

SAY ORIENTALS OUSTING WHITE TRADERS, B.C.

Conference on Eastern Encroachment Planned for Storekeepers

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 3.—Retail storekeepers will be invited by a special civic committee to confer on the subject of Oriental encroachment upon business life of the city. The steady growth in the business being done by Chinese and Japanese traders in Vancouver has caused alarm in certain quarters, and stricter regulations are being urged as a means of checking the expansion, which is said to have caused serious losses to white traders.

The committee has received a report presented by the city license inspector outlining the number of Orientals in business in the old city area, with the proportion operating outside either Chinatown or the Japanese section. The inspector remarked that 56 per cent of the Oriental businesses in the province were situated in Vancouver. Orientals in the old city were engaged in 53 classes of business in 1928.

The report showed that in 1928 there were 79 Chinese greengrocers, of which 77 were outside Chinatown. There were only 14 such businesses operated by persons of other nationalities. In that year there were 37 Chinese grocers, 19 outside Chinatown, and 76 Japanese grocers; 59 outside the area generally occupied by this nationality.

In 1928 there were 59 Japanese barber shops, 40, outside of the Japanese section.

Under the classification of candy dealers, there were 72 Japanese licenses granted, 37 outside of the section occupied by this race. In the cleaning and dyeing business there were 44 licenses to Japanese, 43 outside of the district. There were 84 Japanese lodging houses, 44 outside of the area.

Of the 37 Chinese laudries, 34 were outside of Chinatown. There were 96 Chinese tobacco licenses issued in 1928, of which 35 were in stores outside Chinatown. There were also 147 Japanese tobacconists, 94 outside the Japanese district.

GIANTS IN OIL TRADE CLASH IN BUSINESS WAR

Royal Dutch Shell of Europe in Grips With Standard Oil for Supremacy

Associated Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The New York Times in its news columns today says:

"Breaking a truce under which they called off their price cutting contest in the Far East, the Royal Dutch Shell of Europe and the Standard Oil company of New York, old-time foes, have come to grips again, this time in a struggle for supremacy in the world's most profitable gasoline market—the metropolitan district of New York.

"Within the last month Shell Eastern Petroleum Products, Inc., a subsidiary of the Royal Dutch interests, has obtained control of 110 additional service stations, either through lease or through contracts for the exclusive sale of its products. This brings the Shell chain in the metropolitan area up to 180. Within a month or two, it is understood, this number will be increased by another 100.

Major Trade War

"That a major trade contest has developed between the Shell organization and the Standard of New York, two of the most powerful units in the oil business, is indicated by the speed with which Shell is enlarging its marketing system. The Standard of New York, on the other hand, has struck at its rival by an aggressive expansion program of its own.

"The competitive struggle is not confined to the metropolitan district, although it is most intense in this territory. The Shell interests are expanding their marketing operations throughout New York state and New England, everywhere coming directly into competition with the Standard of New York, which for years has been the principal marketer of gasoline in this section.

May Cut Prices

"Thus far, there has been no price cutting, but it was rumored in trade circles that the contest may shortly reach that stage. Sir Henry Deterding, managing director of the Royal Dutch, recently came into conflict with American oil interests over the latter's proposal to advance the basic export price of gasoline. Plans to put such an increase into effect were held up, it is understood, after a vigorous protest had been filed by Sir Henry. A commission of American oil executives is now in Europe conferring with Sir Henry and other oil operators on this and related questions."

N.S. Fishermen To Get Payment On War Damages

By THOMAS WAYLING
Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

OTTAWA, Aug. 3—There is a surprise waiting for certain Nova Scotia fishermen when they come in from the sea. Jamor Relf, of the Reparation Commission has returned from the Maritimes after investigating the situation with respect to the payment of civilian claims for war damages. There were many claims from fishermen whose ships were wrecked, whose relatives were drowned as a result of enemy activities. The claims that have been allowed have been paid and a score of others only await the return of the fishermen from the sea before they are paid.

Parliament allowed $6,500,000 for the payment of the reparations and approximately $6,400,000 has been paid out. About $160,000 awaits identification of the real owners and the clearing up of letters of administration.

U.S. FARMERS MERGE TO HAVE UNITED VOICE

Eight Leading American Co-operatives Join in Nation-wide Organization

Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 3—Formation of what is described as the largest and most representative union of agricultural interests ever attempted in the United States was undertaken here Friday with organization of the National Co-operative Council of the American Institute of Co-Operation.

Eight of the leading co-operatives in the country, representing 100 commodity groups, numbering a membership of more than a million farmers, participated in the preliminary work of organization. Southern cotton growers, dairymen and milk producers from coast to coast, farmers of the Atlantic seaboard, livestock raisers of the middle west, sheep men of the western states, egg and poultry groups of the far northwest and grain men of the central states were represented on the organization committee.

C. O. Moser, Dallas, Texas, president of the American Institute of Co-operation and head of the American Cotton Growers' exchange, was named temporary president of the new council.

The object of the council, speakers at the organization meeting declared, was to give the farmer a concerted voice in matters dealing with agriculture.

THE TIMES CHANGE

German, French and Japanese cotton interests are said to be enthusiastic over the opportunity, presented to them by the British strike, to capture the trade formerly supplied from British mills. It might be profitable for British employers and employees to study the reasons for this jubilation abroad. The foreign mill-workers must live, and the foreign owners must get dividends on their investments. How come that they are able to do this by supplying customers whom the British mills could not supply at a profit large enough to give wages to the workers and a return to the owners?

Perhaps the foreign cotton-workers get less pay. Perhaps the foreign mill-owners are content with smaller profits. But there is room to suspect that the traditional conservatism of British industrial interests may have something to do with the case. Inventive genius has been busy devising new and better machines for all sorts of manufacturing purposes. Salesmanship has been developed into a high art, and is now as necessary as up-to-date plant and skilled operatives. If Britain's cotton mills are equipped with antiquated machinery, or if the trade is still depending upon the old time methods of marketing the product, this would explain why the British mills are idle and the German, French and Japanese mills working overtime.

EDMONTON AND TOURISTS

Ex-mayor Pendray of Victoria is undoubtedly right when he says Edmonton would attract more motor tourists if it did some advertising. Whether it would attract enough of them to make the undertaking worth while is the point of uncertainty. At present Edmonton cannot offer an outlet or inlet directly to and from the Pacific coast, nor a permanent highway to Jasper Park. When the Jasper trail has been gravelled, and the Park linked up at the far end to the highway system of British Columbia, Edmonton will be located on one of the finest tourist routes in the world. Until that is done the city is handicapped in any effort it may make to attract road tourists from a distance.

That Edmonton is losing tourist traffic and tourist money and favorable publicity by being thus shut off from the Park and from direct all-weather connection with the coast, is certain. It is losing quite enough to justify some urging of the Provincial and Dominion Governments to get on with their program for opening up this northern roadway to and through the mountains. It is too late to get any work done this year. But unless the urging is done this year the work may not be started next year. The automobile association and the business organizations of the city should make the early completion of a permanent highway to the Park, and on to the B.C. highway system, a definite objective.

CHANCE FOR CANADIAN CATTLE

Britain has been drawing 40 per cent of its beef from the Argentine. But Argentine supplies are falling off. Last year the number of cattle slaughtered in the chilling plants there was 404,000 less than during the preceding year, a reduction of 12½ per cent. Exports of chilled and frozen beef were more than two million quarters less than in 1927, a shrinkage of 24 per cent. Shipments to Great Britain declined 18 per cent. From January 1st to April 1st of this year imports into Britain are down 8 per cent in weight, and reports of slaughtering in Argentine show a decline of 15 per cent. from the figures of last year. Argentine ranchers indulged in a "beef war" a couple of years ago, lost money, and reduced their herds. A good many of them are turning to wheat and corn growing and sheep raising as promising larger returns. The hoof and mouth disease has appeared there, and restrictions have been applied by the British authorities which hinder export to the old lands. The outlook thus is for a further shrinkage in shipments to Britain.

This is interesting news for Canadian farmers. It means that Britain will have to look elsewhere for supplies which it has been drawing from the Argentine. This, at the moment when the United States is in the act of shutting our cattle out of that market, is unusually important. It discloses an opportunity which the Dominion Government should promptly investigate. The British householder needs beef. The Canadian farmer needs buyers for cattle, and for many times the number he has been producing in recent years. Canada can supply Britain with almost any amount of beef required there if prices and freight rates leave a fair margin of profit for the grower. Canada once did a thriving trade in live cattle with the old lands. Cheaper cattle and chilled beef from the Argentine killed that trade. Now that Argentine supplies are dwindling, there should be a chance to revive the export of Canadian cattle to Britain, or to establish a chilled meat trade from the Dominion. Should the United States slam the gate, Britain is the one likely place in which to look for a large market.

A Country Place

By EDGAR A. GUEST

I have grown used to the motor horn,
Squeaky wagons disturb me not,
The milk boy banging the gate at dawn
Never disturbs me on my cot,
Factory whistles I never hear,
I can sleep although hammers ring,
But out in the calm of the country here
A crowing cock is a fearsome thing!

In the noisy city where I was born
I seldom wake to a pistol shot.
The thoughtless neighbor who mows his lawn
May bother me once but he's soon forgot.
I have grown used to the engineer
With his heavy hand on the whistle string,
But at country quiet I wake to sneer;
A crowing cock is a fearsome thing!

Here I am, haggard and pale and warn,
With eyelids heavy and temples hot
Tossing about like a man forlorn
In a so-called quiet, secluded spot,
Muttering: "Bird, you're a racketeer!
Yours is a neck that I'd like to wring!"
To a city man with an untrained ear
A crowing cock is a fearsome thing!

L'ENVOI

Prince, I can sleep through all noises queer,
I am not troubled though fire bells ring,
But out in the calm of the country here
A crowing cock is a fearsome thing!

Business Profits

By GLENN FRANK

As the Twentieth Century Limited sped along two business men seated in the club car were discussing a third business man who is today bringing a rare intelligence to the direction of his industry.

Glenn Frans

"That chap," said one of the men, "is one of the real prophets of this generation."

"Where does he preach?" asked the other man.

He was half humorously echoing the feeling that many have that prophecy is the exclusive art of the gaunt ascetic who emerges now and then from the desert and hurls thunderbolts of moral denunciation at a dissolute generation.

But prophecy has in our time become a business asset as well as a religious art, for the highest form of prophecy is but accurate forecasting.

The other day Wilson Compton, manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, set down six changes that he thinks are ahead in the lumber industry, as follows

First, there will be fewer saw mills, the small ones being smaller, the large ones being larger.

Second, there will be fewer wholesalers, and these will be either selling agents of definite groups of mills, purchasing agents for definite groups of mills, or purchasing agents for groups of customers.

Third, more lumber will go into industrial uses and less lumber into building.

Fourth, lumber will be far more completely refined, seasoned, and fabricated before it is shipped.

Fifth, there will be vast developments in wood pulp and wood chemical products, thus making possible the use of small timber and finally the practically complete utilization of the entire tree.

Sixth, the lumber business will become more and more a diversified wood conversion industry and less an exclusively saw mill and planing mill business.

Here is an example of business prophecy. Here is the kind of thinking that the modern business man must do if he is not to be caught napping by the changing world in which his business operates.

Every business needs a great executive, but every business needs also a great prophet, if it is to make great profits.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Diet Specialist and Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions on Health and Diet Answered by Dr. McCoy, when addressed in care of The Edmonton Bulletin

DRINK WATER TO KEEP COOL

If one wishes to keep cool during the warm weather, it is necessary to drink large quantities of water, or to use foods containing water abundantly. Water is the necessary medium with which the skin can regulate the temperature of the body. The skin acts as a sort of thermostat, keeping the body at about a temperature of 98.6 degrees, whether on a warm summer's day, or a cool winter's night.

Frank McCoy

On a hot day the millions of pores of the skin are constantly busy throwing off fine particles of moisture and in this way lowering the temperature and eliminating waste products. Even the warmest day should not feel oppressive if one will allow his body to keep cool by regulating the diet, water drinking, and clothes. Avoid the rich, fatty foods. Keep the starches down to the minimum. Eschew sweets. Wear light clothes. But be especially sure to eat large quantities of the juicy fruits and the fresh vegetables, and drink plenty of water.

It is better to do most of the water drinking between meals when the stomach is empty so as not to over-distend the stomach by the combined food and water. At any time one should drink water when thirsty, but during the warm weather it is sometimes a good plan to drink even a little more than desired. From about nine o'clock to eleven o'clock in the morning it is wise to take from about one to two quarts of cool water. Cool water is more agreeable to the taste and seems to refresh, but I would not advise the use of ice cold drinks to any extent. In the afternoon between three and five o'clock it is advisable to take another quart of water, allowing not less than an hour to elapse before dinner. If this amount of water is used during the day you will not desire to drink much at meals or during the evening. The water taken in the morning does the most good, and it can be absorbed before and used during the warm period of the day.

Only the purest water obtainable should be used, and if any doubt exists as to the purity of the water it is always a good plan to use distilled water, which is entirely free from minerals or bacterial micro-organisms.

Not only is it advisable to use more drinking water, but it is also a good plan to use water externally to keep the skin clean and the mouths of the pores open so as to encourage a greater elimination of perspiration. Every man, woman and child should take at least two shower baths daily, and during the hot day it is very refreshing to take a cold shower in the middle of the day. You do not have to fear any weakening effect from taking several shower baths.

Remember this, that a clean body, inside and out, cannot be a sick body. There is always more danger in not using enough water than in using too much.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question: W. D. F. asks:— "Will you please tell me the name of the rosin and wax preparation for removing superfluous hair, and where it can be procured?"

Answer:— There are many such preparations on the market, and I am sure any druggist can supply you. My policy is not to recommend any particular advertised remedy in this column."

Question: "T. B." writes:—"I have heard that in Russia they take the liver and lungs of a young calf and seal them up and boil for twenty-four hours. This is then used in treating tuberculosis patients. Do you think this treatment is useful or harmful?"

Answer:—There can be no special advantage in taking the food you have written about. A tubercular patient needs to be dieted very carefully, but the main object of the diet should be to supply calcium and provide the best tissue building elements.

Question: G. H. writes:—"I have a gastric ulcer, and do not seem able to take the milk diet. Do you have a diet which excludes milk and which would be suitable for me? Also keep up my weight, which is already below normal?"

Answer:—A liquid is necessary to permit a gastric ulcer to heal. Solid food tears the healing surface of the scar and prevents a cure. The milk diet has proved to be the most satisfactory, but if you have an idiosyncrasy against milk, it might be necessary to substitute non-starchy broths made without meat, or you could use the orange juice fast if the orange does not burn your stomach. Of course, you will lose weight until the ulcer is healed, and for this reason it would be better for you to take a vacation from your work, especially if the work is heavy.

The colonel of an Irish regiment was bawling out a private for cowardice in battle.

"Well, Pat, have you anything to say?"

"Please, sor, before we went into action you said, 'Strike for home and country,' and I struck for home."

For Those Whose Birthday Is Sunday

If you were born on August 4, you should avoid giving too much stress to the pleasurable side of life. A balance is necessary; otherwise you may burn the candle at both ends and eventually find that the greatest period for utility has been wasted. Your best efforts would be expended in any work dealing with the drama, as an antiquarian, writer or travelling salesman. The most favorable periods for attempting anything important in nature where beneficial results are required are the winter of 1929, the spring of 1930, the winter of 1931 and the spring of 1932.

Percy B. Shelley, Born August 4, 1792.

An example of a person born on August 4 is Percy B. Shelley, celebrated English lyric poet, whose horoscope reveals a rebellious, poetic, emotional mind, with an exquisite understanding of the value of words and use thereof. The position of Venus, Saturn and Uranus indicates a Bohemian tendency in the love nature, with a desire for freedom savoring of melancholia when opposed. Among his best known works are "Adonais," "Ode to the West Wind" and "Prometheus Unbound."

Other persons born on this day are Sir Harry Lauder and Knut Hamsun, Norway's foremost living writer.

MONDAY

Planetary Influences on Monday for ALL.

Propitious for taking journeys and for making changes. It favors all creative work and literary ventures as well as any projects dealing with the public. Speculation is favored, particularly in those products dealing with chemicals, food-stuffs, coppers, vehicles and radios. An excellent day for all social activities, for the signing of contracts and for dealing with superiors. It also favors aviation.

For Those Whose Birthday is Monday

If you were born on August 5 you have a brave and generous disposition, earnest and sincere, particularly when championing a cause. You are inclined to be militant, but you will never permit yourself to become too aggressive, as this influence would not prove of benefit to you during the course of life. Your best efforts would be expended in any work dealing with politics, the law, aviation, astronomy, invention, exporting and industrial work of any type dealing with the public. The most favorable periods for attempting anything important in nature where beneficial results are required are the winter of 1929, the spring of 1930 and the year 1931.

Guy de Maupassant, Born August 5, 1850

An example of a person born on August 5 is Guy de Maupassant, famous French novelist, whose horoscope indicates a vivacious, brilliant, amiable and generous mind. The position of Saturn, Venus and Mercury indicates rather an unemotional love nature and the power of a materialist making a sincere attempt to bring forth the most spiritual side of life. Mars and Saturn lend a peculiar domineering element to the nature when under opposition, but also sufficient farsightedness to overcome any obstacles. Among his best-known works are: "La Maison Tellier" and "Une Vie."

Other persons born on this day are Major General Malin Craig and William S. Culbertson, United States minister to Rumania.

TUESDAY

Planetary Influences on Tuesday for ALL

Today is favorable for speculation dealing with commodities, chemicals and copper. It is a favorable day for commercial interests, particularly those dealing with manufacturers of home utilities. It is favorable for all creative work in publishing and is excellent for making changes.

For Those Whose Birthday Is Tuesday

If you were born on August 6 you have a very conservative and patriotic nature and may find that many fortunate situations confront you. You have the ability to become distinguished through your sincerity in definite fields. Do everything in your power to benefit from any such contacts. Your best efforts would be expended in any work dealing with navigation, oratory, politics, or any work requiring direct contact with the public. The most favorable periods for attempting anything important in nature where beneficial results are required are the winter of 1929, the spring of 1930, the winter of 1931 and the spring of 1932.

Alfred Tennyson, Born August 6, 1809

An example of a person born on August 6 is Alfred Tennyson, celebrated English poet, whose horoscope reveals an eloquent tongue and a convincing mind with an ambitious delicate and romantic strain. Mars and Saturn did not assist him with good business insight and were a source of much difficulty. The position of Saturn and the moon give a love of solitude and as a result he led a rather secluded life.

Other persons born on this day are Mrs. Edith K. Roosevelt, Post Wheeler, Secretary of the United States Embassy in London, and Dr. Scott Nearing, lecturer.

Keeping Mentally Fit

By Joseph Jastrow, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., LL.D.

TURNING POINTS IN CAREERS

I am very much interested in your column and particularly so now that I am at a turning point and wondering what to do to regain my gait and energy. I went to work as a steno at the age of 17, have been at the one place ever since, until I am now rounding out my 28th year. I have been secretary of the company for ten years, and expected some day the business would be mine. The president and only other principal stockholder beside myself has died and left the business to his heirs, with no mention of myself; so rather than continue without any more assurance of a benefit further than my salary, I have told them to proceed and dispose of the company. It is a machinery house and on the decline. I now feel that I should undertake some other line of work than office routine so as to take care of myself for later years. I have remained youthful, so that I can still pass for ten years younger than I am. The only thing is I now seem to be developing an inferiority complex, and I wonder what I can do to bring myself back before I get in too deep. Can you help me? MISS M. C. C.

Reply

I have had few business problems presented to me for the obvious reason that these seem to present personal or professional rather than psychological issues, and again because tradition and the flywheel of circumstance determine them. Most persons just keep on, and there are no turning points in their career; there are small corners to be turned and little decisions to be met, but no real critical moments. "Shall I go on, or shall I change?" The junction is passed, and they hardly know it. The real turning point in career are those that one makes for one's self; circumstances often favor them.

Joseph Jastrow

The psychological view is this: The problems of life are a set of adjustments, each important, each dominant in its own sphere, each aiding and affecting the other. First is your personal adjustment, the intimate human relations in which you live and move and have your being. Second, and part of it, your family life, with all its ramifications. Third, is your business life. You must eat to live and the daily bread must be gained; few of us can do what we choose. But the present problem refers to those who are able to take the larger view of the place their business takes in the general scheme of living. If more persons asked themselves whether the satisfactions they are obtaining from what they are doing is a sufficient compensation, there would be more turning points in careers. It takes courage to change an embark on ventures new; circumstances often enter and compel the decision.

Now that women are in business, it is no longer strange that the problem should arise in their case; for there is a special temptation for women in business to feel that in some sense they are or are regarded as inferior to men. They rarely hope to go as far; to have a career mean as much to them as it does to men. The readjustment when it must be faced is proportionately harder; it is more difficult to make the earlier experience count. Such is this case. What this woman has to face is not only the inner problem of maintaining a feeling of fitness for a responsible job, but the prejudice of the business world that is likely to stand in the way of offering such opportunities to a woman.

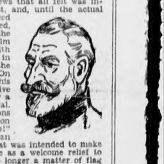
This woman like many men has thrown the larger share of her life energy into a career; accordingly it means more to her than to most women. She needs the satisfaction of a successful career and deserves it, not merely as a compensation to provide for old age but as a means of maintaining her interest in life. Any advice will simply re-enforce what she already knows; that the major factor is to face the situation with courage and self-respect. At that age she is right in expecting to go up and to look forward.

Turning points in careers have all the attraction and the danger of hazards; they should be welcomed as opportunities as well as trials, not accepted as misfortunes or interruptions even though as in this case, they contain a factor of disappointment. Corporations are said to have no souls and institutions no more gratitude. Part of the compensation of being one's own master is the feeling of independence. When that is attained, there is a turning point in one's career. We call it competency in more senses than one,

On This Date—

AUGUST 3RD

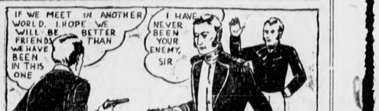
Germany declares war on France, August 3rd, 1914. Fifteen years have passed since those hot August days when the people of London, and the wide flung cities of the Empire awaiting restlessly the news that all felt was inevitable. Hope reigns eternal in the human breast, and, until the actual announcement of the violation of Belgium had forced us to take a hand in the great game, people waited, breathless, alternating between hope for peace and the call of unknown adventure. As in the uncanny calm that precedes a storm the atmosphere was vibrant with impending evil. Crowds paced the streets, or stood in hushed groups, like expectant humans watching the darkening sky as the clouds roll over the horizon. On the afternoon of this day Sir Edward Grey made his historic speech to the House of Commons. Impressive in its entire absence of passion it was listened to by a tense house which signified its unanimous approval. "We were bound by the most sacred treaty obligations to protect the neutrality of Belgium. That afternoon King Albert had appealed to Great Britain for help!" Bismark had fought three wars to create the German Empire. Imperial Germany was starting another that was intended to make it a World power. The breaking of the storm came as a welcome relief to the tension of the previous days. Patriotism was no longer a matter of flag waving. What it really meant was to be discovered in the dark days ahead. Time is already beginning to deaden the anguish of those years of fortitude and privation. Occasionally the echo of a war song comes floating from the past to recall the days of battle and bivouac but it is slowly passing into history leaving little but the story of its heroism and the glory of its recollections—dulce bellum inexpertis—war is sweet to those who have not tried it!



Famous Hates and Haters

By J. P. GLASS

Stephen Decatur's Death at 41 was Due to Revengeful Desires of Former Commander



IF WE MEET IN ANOTHER WORLD, I HOPE WE WILL BE BETTER FRIENDS THAN WE HAVE BEEN IN THIS ONE
I HAVE NEVER BEEN YOUR ENEMY, SIR

The fact Commodore Stephen Decatur could not forget was that Commodore James Barron had not fought in the war of 1812.

Barron, he felt, could have fought. His five-year suspension for ingloriously allowing the British Leopard to board his vessel, the Chesapeake, and take off three deserters—two of whom were American citizens—in 1807, had ended, five months after war began. But Barron made no offer to fight. He waited until peace was declared and then asked for reinstatement.

As a member of the Navy Commissioners, Decatur voted to reject the plea.

Barron was enraged. After all, he never had been charged, as commander of the Chesapeake, with cowardice. The court martial which suspended him had merely found him guilty of going to sea in a state of unpreparedness.

Barron recalled that Commodore Decatur had been one of those who had court-martialed him. Now Decatur sought to deny him reinstatement.

This from a man whom Barron once had commanded. His hatred became vindictive.

He sent Decatur a challenge to a duel.

Friends tried to prevent Decatur from accepting. They failed. With Commodore Bainbridge acting as his second he met Barron at Bladensburg, March 22, 1820.

"I shall not kill him," he announced. "Indeed, I will not return his fire at all."

This attitude was generous in the extreme, for Decatur was an excellent marksman. Bainbridge thought it too generous. He pointed out that since Barron was near-sighted, they were to fire when only eight paces apart.

Decatur naturally did not wish to lose his own life. He reconsidered. "But I shall just wound him in the hip," he said.

The seconds placed them at the agreed distance. Bainbridge said he would give the word as follows:

"Present . . . one . . . two . . . three!" They were not to fire before "one", or after "three."

"If we meet in another world," Barron told Decatur at this point, "I hope we will be better friends than we have been in this."

Decatur replied: 'I have never been your enemy, sir."

Bainbridge counted: "One . . . two . . ." Both pistols spoke. Both men fell. Barron was wounded in the hip, as Decatur had promised. Decatur was shot through the abdomen.

"I wish I had fallen in defense of my country," he said. He died at ten o'clock that night. Only 41, he had become America's most illustrious naval figure since Paul Jones, celebrated for his victorious campaign against the Tripolitan pirates and half a dozen great sea fights.

Barron later asserted that he was in prison abroad for debt during the war of 1812.

NOTED SINGER GIVES VIEWS ON MICROPHONE

Esther Dale Tells of Singing Before Radio Device

"How do I like broadcasting?"

Esther Dale repeated the interviewer's question with a twinkle in her eye. "Instead of replying to your query, I think I shall answer the one that is so often addressed to me by my friends: How do you feel and what do you think about when you are singing to the microphone?

"Before I had done any broadcasting, I fancied that the thought uppermost in the artist's mind must be that of the immense, invisible audience in thousands of homes, and that before the eye of imagination there would spread a vast panorama of cities and countryside. But to my surprise I have found that it is utterly impossible for me to visualize my auditors in the slightest degree. As far as sensation is concerned, I am conscious only of a vague, indefinite space—an abysmal void into which I am projecting my voice. There is something strangely impersonal about the whole process not only am I unconscious of the personalities who may be hearing me, but I forget my own individuality and become completely absorbed in what I am doing. When I have finished a song, I return to reality as though coming out from a day-dream.

Can Concentrate

"That does not mean that my wits are wool-gathering. One can concentrate intently in a reverie, and that is what I can do. The sense of isolation and absorption leaves me free to think exclusively of singing—not so much of tone production as of emotional expression. I find that I must project much more vividly than in recital the atmosphere of every song; each nuance of mood must be given its right value, and every dynamic stress exactly placed. In the concert hall, the auditor receives a complex impression in which voice, style, facial expression, and the magnetism of the artist are compounded; in radio singing, everything must be conveyed by the voice alone.

"This concentration sharpens one's self-criticism, stimulates the faculties, and calls upon all the resources of technique and expression. My experience leads me to believe that broadcasting cannot help but prove beneficial to the public recital work of any artist.

Sunday Programs

"The Sunday programs, in which I am collaborating this summer with the Old World Trio of Ancient Instruments at Station WEAF, are devoted to music of the sixteenth, seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries. I had not realized how many neglected lyrical treasures there are of that period, and it was simply amazing to discover the variety and beauty of the songs. We find that we cannot begin to utilize the material available. The work is a great pleasure to us all. We not only enjoy it ourselves, but we are trying to bring to the radio public realization of the fact that old music is not defunct just because it is old, but that it is full of radiant vitality, color and gracious charm.

"I wish that the friends who tell me what a relief our work is from the ordinary type of program would pass this word on to the program directors of the broadcasting studios. The public surely must be bored by some of the hackneyed music that goes over the air. For example, it was brought to my attention recently that two selections from 'Pagliacci': 'Vesti la giubba,' and the Prologue, were broadcast ten and twelve times respectively in the space of one week. Monotony of this kind can easily be avoided by co-operation between the artists and the directors."

Novel Program Has Been Planned

Anton Rovinsky, pianist, is arranging a novel program for his New York recital on October 19 in Town Hall. He has not yet selected a title, as he is wavering between two, either one of which will express the idea which he has in mind. His program will be provocative and fully in keeping with the reputation he has established for originality and daring.

Pianist Taking Well-earned Rest

Having devoted some time to professional work in London and Paris, Charles Naegele, pianist, is now beginning a month's vacation on the "Azure Coast" of France. His headquarters will be in a small villa between Antibes and Juan-les-Pins. When this period of recreation is over, he will visit Rome, Milan, Vienna and Berlin, returning to New York in September. His active season will start with a tour of Eastern Canada and the North Atlantic States. After his New York recital in Carnegie Hall on January 7, the first that he has given in that metropolis for three years, he will tour the middle west.

Queens

Queens of beauty and of the keyboard are Irma Wright of Toronto (above), world's amateur champion typist, and Louise Marchese of Vancouver, champion of Canada, who hope to win greater typing renown for the dominion at the forthcoming 24th International Typewriting contest at Toronto. Miss Wright aspires to the world's open title, and Miss Marchese to Miss Wright's international amateur crown. To win them, they'll have to defeat the swiftest typists in the United States.

TELLS OF HOW MENDELSSOHN MET GOETHE

Great Composer Never Forgot Walk Toward Home of Poet

Felix never forgot that walk as he and Zelter went along the maple-skirted promenade toward the home of Goethe, never forgot the splendid houses of the great, the ducal palace, the cathedral, the peasant cottages, and the wind-whipped fields they passed on the way, and years afterward described them as vividly as if they had been beheld a half hour before, for every sight in Weimar seemed to be painted on his brain in unfading colors. He walked eagerly, expectantly, beside his teacher, and finally they came to a great house, rambling like a Saxon citadel, and heavily windowed on every side. As they went in at the gate a voice from among the trees called, "Zelter! Have you brought the Medelssohn boy from Berlin?"

A heavy, rather short man, with blue, piercing eyes and hair softly flecked with gray, came down the path to meet them. Then Felix heard his teacher saying, "This is Herr Goethe," and he knew he was face to face with the poet all Germany declared was greater than the king.

Impulsively he took the wrinkled hand outstretched to meet his own and presented the verbena Gretchen gave him. His blue eyes were luminous as the master smiled down on the blossoms, saying, "Thank you, boy, and thank the little inn maid too. I shall keep them and remember you both."

Suddenly, from the cathedral tower, came the notes of an old German choral, and a Kyrie Eleison, sweet as an angel's song, sounded across the garden. Felix stood like one entranced, drinking in the beauty of the music and forgetting everything but the glory of the chimes. Perhaps he would have stayed there for a long time in a sort of revery, but the master, who had been watching him curiously, laid his hand on his shoulder and said, "Let us go into the house now, for I want to hear music sweeter than that of the chimes."—By Katherine Dunlap Cather.

Plans To Resume Work In Opera

Fernanda Doria, mezzo-soprano, whose time has been given mainly to recitals since her return from four years in Italy, will resume operatic work when she appears this coming season with the Philadelphia Civic Opera Company as Fricka in "Das Rheingold" and "Die Walkure". Endowed with a rich and ample voice, dramatic power, and a magnetic personality, Miss Doria has scored her most notable successes in such roles as Carmen, Amneris, Delilah, Leonora, Laura and Azucena.

SONG OF A SPRING NIGHT

The flush of green that dyed the day
Hath vanished in the moon;
The strengthened odours float and play
An unborn coming tune.

One southern eve like this—the dew
Had cooled and left the ground;
The moon hung half-way from the blue,
No disc but folded round:

Light-leaved acacias, by the door,
Bathed in the balmy air,
Clusters of blossomed moonlight bore
And breathed a perfume rare.
—George Macdonald Poems.

Many Fine Releases On Victor's August List

Both Classical and Popular Music Included in Widely Varied Selection—Toscanine Makes Debut as Victor Artist

A real feast of music awaits all orthophonic devotees who check over the August releases of the Victor organization. All musical tastes are accounted for and catered to and the wide variety of selections included should please all.

A notable feature is the appearance of a new Victor artist in the person of Arturo Toscanini, world famous conductor from La Scala opera house, Milan, who makes his debut on the Victor. Last season he appeared as guest conductor with the New York Philharmonic orchestra and he is now heard with this organization in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," by Paul Dukas. The record is a double sided one. The piece is after a poem by the great German poet, Goethe, and the reading of this number by the dynamic conductor from La Scala is sure to make a wide appeal.

Great Number

Two double-sided records are included of the Philadelphia Orchestra playing Tchaikovsky's "Capriccio Italien" or "Italian Caprice." This great number is given an admirable interpretation by Stokowski and his wonderful players. Tchaikovsky was profoundly impressed on a visit to Italy and incorporated his impressions of the sunny land in this caprice. The Italian cavalry, the street songs and dances all made an impression on his mind and in composing the number he imbued it with many novel and original orchestral devices which since have been followed and become standard matters. These two records should prove highly popular.

Florence Austral, soprano, is heard in a double sided record of "Ye that are Sorrowful," from Brahms' "Requiem." This has as a background the Royal Opera, Covent Garden chorus and orchestra, conducted by John Barbirolli. Austral's magnificent voice is splendidly adapted to this number, which is destined to become one of her finest records.

The Berlin State Opera Orchestra gives a splendid double-sided record of Weber's "Euryanthe" overture, played with all the lightness and grace demanded by the subject.

An Event

An item which should stand out as one of the greatest events in recording history is the issue of a complete performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's wonderful production "Trial by Jury."

The recording has been done by the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company under the direction of Rupert D'Oyly Carte, son of the founder of the justly world famous opera company.

"Trial by Jury" has proved one of the greatest of the Gilbert and Sullivan collaborations. The recording is specially clear. Every word, every syllable of Gilbert's precious humor can be heard distinctly and every word and every note will remain a gem. If these records are followed closely there will be just as much laughter today as there was when the opera was first produced at the Old Royalty theatre, London, on March 25, 1875, and at thousands of performances since.

The records can be obtained in a separate album.

Popular Items

In the more popular or ephemeral type of music there is a wide selection.

Waring's Pensylvannians, heard recently in the Rialto theatre's picture, "Syncopation," contribute several numbers, as do Nat Shilkret and his Victor orchestra and Rudee Valee and his Connecticut Yankees and other popular organizations.

Maurice Chevalier, Vernon Dalhart, Johnny Marvin and others are to be heard, while Sousa's band contributes a brace of marches bound to stir the blood.

ENGLISH SONG

Now 'tis the Spring,
The birds do sing
Their songs of love unspoken
O cruel ditty!
Have you no pity
For me whose heart is broken?

The grass lies deep,
The willows weep:
O willow, willow!
Hear you my crying,
Where she is lying
There be my pillow!
—H. E. Summers in the Weekly Scotsman.

Violinist Selects Date For Recital

Gilbert Ross, violinist, has selected an October date for his New York recital in Town Hall. He is now teaching at the Summer School of the University of Wisconsin, and as soon as the sessions are over, he will spend a month in the wooded country of western Ontario, canoeing, fishing and hunting. The early part of October will be occupied with a concert tour of the middle west.

English Baritone Gets Engagement

John Goss, the English baritone whose first American tour was so markedly successful, has been reengaged for the Sea Music Festival next January in Victoria, B.C. Mr. Goss will be in the United States for six months, and his second tour will take him the length and breadth of the country.

Kurt Weill's new opera, entitled "The Surrender of Acajou," will be ready for presentation next September.

TO AN IRISH BLACKBIRD

Wet your feet, wet your feet,
This is what he seems to say,
Calling from the dewy thicket
At the breaking of the day.

Wet your feet, wet your feet,
Silver toned he sounds the call
From the bramble in the thicket
When the dew is on the fall.

Years have passed since last I heard him,
Since I said a sad adieu
To the early Irish morning
With the rainbowtinted dew.

And I still can hear him calling
And the call comes clear and sweet,
And I still can see the mornings
With the rainbow-tinted dew.

Wet your feet, wet your feet,
Silver toned he sounds the call
From the bramble in the thicket
When the dew is on the fall.
—James MacAlpine in The Literary Review of the New York Evening Post.

PHILOMEL

They have said all things of you, nightingale, save this—that you, like all the rest who sing through the passionate midnight, fail
when song is loveliest,

When, like a juggler tossing at the sun
a hundred torches, from your torchlit throat you toss the colored shadows of the one uncapturable note.

But, when you are suddenly silent, I hear that note,
the same, I think, that Robert Browning heard,
when hands were laid over his eyes, and he wrote:
"Angel!" but wondered, "bird?"
—Humbert Wolfe, in "This Blind Rose."

'PAN' PATRONS HEAR PROGRAM GOOD MUSIC

Al Preston and His Orchestra Provide Light, Tuneful Numbers

Music continues to be a feature of the Pantages theatre programs during the summer months.

Al Preston and his now justly celebrated and famous orchestra are appearing in a special concert presentation from 8:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings. For the last three days of the current week there was a light, but particularly enjoyable program, including the popular "Wedding of the Painted Doll" by Nacio Herb Brown, one of the items in "The Broadway Melody" picture; "Dream Train" a characteristic number in which there are reproductions of various sounds made by a train in action and a symphonic-jazz arrangement of a medley of Scottish airs.

Mr. Preston and his players are proving a real drawing card and rightly so as their programs are well worth hearing.

Famous 'Cellist Has Busy Holiday

Felix Salmond's summer vacation at Blue Hill, Maine, where he is enjoying life in the open on the golf links and tennis courts, will soon be at an end, as his concert work will be resumed during the last month of summer. Cornell University has engaged him for a recital on August 6, when he will be heard on the Leslie Buswell concert course at Gloucester, Mass. Other engagements are being booked for the free time that remains before he resumes his teaching at the Juilliard Graduate School and the Curtis Institute of Music. His Canadian debut will take place on November 14 at the English Folkmusic and Dance Festival in Toronto, and on the following day he will appear as soloist with the Rochester symphony orchestra. Immediately after his appearance with the friends of music in New York on February 18 the English 'cellist will start for California, where he will fill several dates, including recitals in Pasadena and at Pomona College. His two New York recitals in Town Hall will be given on December 14 and March 9.

Popular Pianists Gain Approval

No more popular team of two-piano recitalists is to be found today in the American concert field than June Wells and Gizi Szanto. Since their brilliant debut in New York last winter brought them the unanimous approval of the metropolitan critics, their reputation as admirable artists spread extensively, and they are already in demand for concert appearances. Their seasonal activities will begin early this year, and their tour, which is now being booked, will start on August 22 with a recital at the State Normal College in Kent, Ohio.

Arranged Date For Appearance

Grace Divine, mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan, will be heard in a New York recital on October 13 in Town Hall. She has been engaged as orchestral soloist at Springfield, Mass. on November 5, and as soloist for the Haarlem Philharmonic Society in New York on December 19.

Advance Bookings Very Numerous

Advance bookings for the Liebeslieder Ensemble are so numerous that the four vocalists will experience difficulty in arranging their time so that their individual engagements will not be in conflict. The organization is composed of Esther Dale, soprano; Elizabeth Lennox, contralto; Paul Althouse, tenor; Jerome Swinford, baritone, and the De Packh Ensemble of 12 instruments. The month of December will find the Ensemble busy with engagements in the North Atlantic States, and there will be a Spring tour of Ohio, Kentucky, Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

HOW IT'S GROWN

An idea of the growth of the radio broadcasting industry is shown in the comparison of the number of stations in the United States eight years ago with the number today. Eight years ago KDKA, Pittsburgh, was the only broadcasting station in the country—today there are around 630.

A festival of North German composers is to be held in Kiel this week, conducted by Fritz Stein, the announced program includes the first performance of "Jerusalem die Hochgebaute Stadt," by Kurt Thomas, and several works by Kurt Atterberg, Jensen, Liefs, Sibelius and Raasted. Bruckner's E. Minor Mass and Bach's "St. Matthew's Passion" will be heard at the final concerts.

BUILDERS PAGE

Values Are Hidden Inside Upholstered Furniture By Maker

With so many ways to cheapen upholstered furniture, the only guarantee of reliability that the buying public has is in its knowledge and confidence of the methods of the manufacturer. Briefly, this is the story in regard to upholstered furniture.

Stripping off the outside cover, what do we find inside? First of all, there must be a framework of wood on which to build. Next, there must be springs to give resilience and life. There must be padding of some kind. Then the assembly or fabrication of it all.

The best wood for the frame is ash. Birch is another very good wood for the frame. Both ash and birch, however, are more expensive than other woods which may be used; so right here the cheapening process can begin.

Springs Carefully Tied

Across the bottom of the piece, before anything else is put in at all, the maker weaves a bed of webbing to which the springs will be sewed. Then, when springs are sewed into the webbing, tied together at four points at the top with strong cord, and the bedding is put in place, all are covered and held in by burlap and muslin. With each of these there are, naturally, many grades of quality which may be selected, and which, of course, will vary greatly in cost to the manufacturer.

In the matter of the springs, there are many grades to be bought, and also the quality may be slighted by placing the springs too far apart. In a well made davenport, for instance, there is necessary at least five sizes of springs: little ones for the arms; deep ones for the middle of the seat; shallower ones for the ends of the seat, which will get less hard wear; middle sized ones for the back. The attaching of the springs is a highly skillful piece of work, requiring training and experience to determine how much tension to give.

It is in the padding itself that there is the greatest opportunity for cheapening. The best upholstery materials are curled horse hair and down. Both of these are used in the best pieces. The best hair is long South American gray hair. Such material costs the manufacturer money and in the mad race for making a cheaper and still cheaper product there are manufacturers who use even pig hair. With down, also, there are many grades ranging in price to the manufacturer from $1.65 to $8 per pound.

Many Ways to Cheapen

Cotton and kapock may be used instead of down or hair. One can tell a chair upholstered with either of these materials as it will not have the live resilience of a chair upholstered in hair or down.

Another element in the cost of upholstered furniture is the large amount of hand labor that is necessary. In fact, it is virtually impossible to upholster furniture by machinery. In a piece properly made the labor cost constitutes about 70 per cent of the total.

The design of upholstered furniture is another item of very great importance. Not so long ago it was virtually impossible to buy a comfortable, padded chair or davenport that had any distinction of design. Fortunately, the situation in this regard is immeasurably better today.

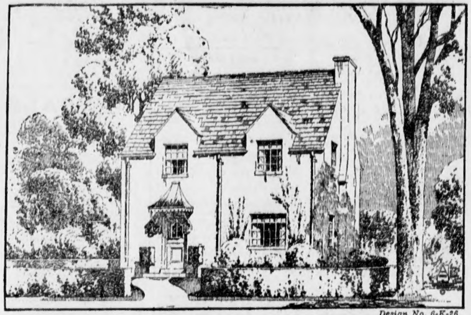
Paramount Points In Planning

What are the chief considerations in selecting a home-building plan? Arranged in order of importance they are roughly as follows: Economic use of materials and labor; Convenience; Comfort; Interior attractiveness; Exterior attractiveness; Finish.

Don't look at your dream house from the outside inwards. Look at it from the inside out. Try to place yourself in imagination inside it. Study the arrangement of the rooms and stairs, take into consideration the saving of steps, the later installation of labor-saving devices, the question of lighting, passages, cupboards, windows, recesses, heating and ventilation.

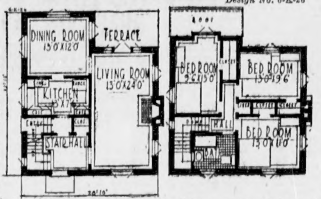
Kitchens are smaller but better furnished with built-in and other devices for saving steps and labor. Bedrooms are smaller than they were, but better ventilated, and usually with more closet space than was the rule even in the old-fashioned rambling houses. Dining-rooms, too, are being reduced in size or eliminated altogether; their place either being taken by breakfast rooms, which are usually sufficient for small families or for homes where there is little entertaining; or else dining facilities are included in the plan of the living-room. The latter is the pivotal point of the entire modern dwelling. Gone are the days when the parlor or drawing room was practically closed to the household except on Sundays or when company came in. Living-rooms are being expanded to take care of the tendency of the modern family to live in the front of the house, instead of cooping themselves up in the smaller and darker rooms at the back.

An Orderly and Commodious Plan



Design No. 6-K-26

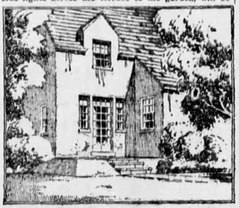
Straightforward Exterior and Interior



THIS design, 6-K-26, is another proof of a principle that every architect knows, namely, that fine architecture does not depend on added ornamentation. There are no ornamental features here excepting the bit of copper canopy over the front door. But the shape of the walls, the location of the windows, the setting of the roof make an extremely decorative exterior. Thus we have one of the first principles of good architecture. The home builder gets a beautiful small home without paying extra money for it.

Now take the plan. Here also is an orderly arrangement without expensive twists and turns. The rooms are of fine size and the arrangement is good. There will be no lost motion in housekeeping. At the same time, there are a great many beauties about it.

The long living room, with its fireplace and extra large windows, its vista through French doors and side lights across the terrace to the garden, will be most pleasant. The dining room and stair hall are separated from the living room by plastered arches, which, balancing each other, add additional qualities of fine appearances.



The dining room has windows on three sides, a rather unusual feature. Those which open on the terrace may be French doors at the home builder's option.

The kitchen is completely equipped with space for everything and everything in its place. It is the type of kitchen where a turn and a step brings all within easy reach. The direct entrance to the grade entrance and basement as well as to the front stair hall from the kitchen will appeal to many women.

In the second story are the usual three bedrooms, but also unusual closet space. The smallest possible area is given over to hallway, and thus the bedrooms are of larger size. The bathroom, too, is commodious.

The little sketch is taken from the rear of the house to show the terrace in the angle between dining room and living room. The dining room window may be made into a door.

Construction: Concrete masonry, exterior finish stucco. Cement shingle roof. First floor slab reinforced concrete. Basement cross walls of concrete masonry. Steel casement windows throughout.

What You May Want To Know About Building

Questions addressed to this paper will be answered by the Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States, Inc. Enclose a stamped addressed envelope.

Q—We have trouble during the winter time with snow backing up in the hanging gutters under the shingles, where it melts and comes back through the ceiling. Now we are repairing the roof and want to overcome this. What is the best way?

A—Put down at least two widths of felt or three ply roofing all along the edge of the roof, lap the joints and cement down well. Your roof covering goes over this.

Q—Is it true that hot water radiators should not be bronzed? If so, what should be used instead?

A—Yes. Radiators should be painted.

Q—What is the most efficient clothes closet for a bedroom? How should it be equipped?

A—The most efficient closet is one completely equipped for use with special hangers for clothing, racks for shoes, drawers and shelves for special uses. Closet manufacturers make special devices for these purposes, rendering closet space more valuable, requiring less floor area.

Q—Is it proper to install a fireplace that will have its flue connected with the furnace flue?

A—No. The draft from the furnace flue will be spoiled if you do this. You may get smoke blowing down the chimney into the fireplace. It is a fixed rule to have a separate flue for each fire.

Q—Is it all right to use broken bricks, refuse plaster and so on as fill in the place where I will build a garage?

A—Yes. Cover with cinders. Let it become well settled before you put on the concrete floor.

Q—We put in a red cement walk and it faded out. Can we paint it with anything to make it red again?

A—There is nothing you can do with your cement walk to make it red again. This is what happened before they learned how to color cement.

Q—Is poured concrete for foundations better than a concrete block foundation that is waterproofed?

A—These are both sound methods of construction, assuming that the concrete blocks are thoroughly waterproofed and that heavy water pressure does not exist. Inquire of those who have built in your district as to their satisfaction with the block type of construction. If it has worked out satisfactorily, use it with confidence.

Q—We wish to refinish our house and should like to know whether to use paper or paint. In repairing is it necessary to remove old paper? If so, how?

A—This is purely a matter of taste. Some people like paper, others like paint. Both are right. If your walls are now papered, it would probably be wise to repaper them. Old paper should be removed. It should be wet down and scraped off carefully so as not to mar the plaster. Get a good paper-hanger to do the job.

Greater satisfaction will be assured if, before building operations are commenced, you have a preliminary set of plans made. You can then study each room, put the plans aside for a while, and then pick them up again, thus, over a period of time, familiarizing yourself with what the various rooms will be like, almost as though you were actually living in them. By so doing you will doubtless be struck from time to time with improvements that might be made, and after thinking these over, a revised set of plans can be made from which the home finally will be built.

BERT LYTELL IN STAR ROLE RIALTO FILM

Heads Cast in "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" Here Monday

In announcing that all next week at the Rialto theatre will be shown the Columbina Pictures production of the moving picture version of Louis Joseph Vance's great story "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" Manager William J. Long of the Rialto Theatre feels that he is telling his patrons something in which they will be particularly interested.

Mr. Long has made some important pronouncements in his career as manager of the Rialto, but even he feels that few have been as far reaching as the announcement of the coming of this truly great feature.

The picture is not only great from a point of being taken from one of the best known and most popular stories of recent years, but it is great in achievement of photography and acting.

For the first time in motion picture history, television has been used in motion picture production and the while process and transmission of objects by radio is shown on the screen. Many difficulties were encountered in this, but the resources of the Columbia studios were equal to all demands made upon them.

Another great feature of the production is a mad ride in an automobile. This in itself is calculated to produce more thrills than a whole ordinary picture gives.

Heading the cast is Bert Lytell, who enjoys the distinction of being the only actor ever to play the "Lone Wolf" on the screen, even though the character is familiar to every motion picture patron in the world. He has assumed the role many times, but his latest portrayal of the famous cracksman in "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" is said to be his best.

Also showing on the same program will be Frank Crumit, noted orthophonic and musical comedy star who will sing his great success, "A Gay Cabalero." His verses in this number are unusually funny and his own inimitable way of putting a song over are to be much commended.

A Sreen Snapshots reel giving personal interviews and close-ups of a group of famous Hollywood stars will round out the program, which Mr. Long feels will be the equal of any he has yet shown at the Rialto.

HUGE SET WAS USED IN FILM TO OPEN HERE

"Tide of Empire," Gold Rush Story, for the Pantages

A motion picture "set" more than two miles deep, setting the record for size in artificial scenic production, was the technical feat accomplished in "Tide of Empire," Cosmopolitan's lavish filmization of Peter B. Kyne's romance of the California gold rush, which will be the holiday attraction at the Pantages theatre.

This huge set is a complete landscape, built into a hill near the Culver City studios of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with hundred of tents, a mining town, roadways, streets and a canyon through which the Wells Fargo coaches with their armed guards dash in a headlong race.

The cameras were suspended from a bridge fifty feet in the air over the set while a sensational battle between bandits and express guards was filmed.

More than five hundred people took part in that scene.

In Provocative Pose

Patsy Ruth Miller, who stars with Edward Everett Horton in "The Hottentot," one of the Warner Brothers' new productions.

MILTON SILLS TO PLAY HERE

Will Appear in "Love and the Devil" at the Empress

The glamor of back-stage life is brought to the screen in colorful manner in First National's dramatic story "Love and the Devil," which stars Milton Sills at the Empress, starting Monday, Civic holiday.

Sills plays an English explorer in the story, and falls in love with an Italian prima dona, portrayed by Maria Corda, the beautiful European actress.

Local News Reel At Four Theatres

News and views of local happenings will be shown on the screens of the Rialto, Monarch, Dreamland and Princess theatres all next week. Manager William J. Long of the Rialto and Manager Alex Entwistle of the Monarch, Dreamland and Princess theatres have made special arrangements with Long's Limited, operating the A.B.C. Studios to snap a series of important local happenings.

It is expected that the reel will include snaps of the Trudeau picnic as well as the Elks Lodge picnic and not a few shots of the Highland games which will take place at the Exhibition Grounds over the week-end.

These local news reels have been proving a feature at all theatres where they have been showing and next week's views promise to be equal to the best.

The unusual thing happened in a southern town the other day when a negro woman committed suicide.

"Why is it, Rastus," an old negro was asked, "that so few negroes ever commit suicide?"

"It's dis way, boss; when a white man gets in trouble and sets down to worry over it, he gets despret and kills hisself. When a nigger sets down he goes to sleep."

BARTHELMESS FEATURED IN SOUND FILM

"Weary River" Opens Run at the Monarch on Monday

Richard Barthelmess is now heard as well as seen. The star of twoscore features, famed for his "Broken Blossoms," his "Tol'able David" and his "Patent Leather Kid," is now being heard in "Weary River," his newest First National starring feature coming to the Monarch theatre next Monday.

In "Weary River" Barthelmess not only talks but plays the piano. A Vitaphone test proved his voice of excellent quality for talking pictures and advnace notices predict unprecedented success for the initial Barthelmess talkie.

"Weary River" is from the short story by Courtney Ryley Cooper, adapted to the screen by Bradley King and directed by Frank Lloyd. It relates the story of a convict who sings over the radio, wins a parole becomes famous and wins the love of a girl. It is a wide departure from anything Barthelmess has done heretofore and offers him the sort of human characterization in which he excels.

"The Lariat Kid" Opening On Monday

The romance of the old West provides a colorful and interesting background for "The Lariat Kid," Hoot Gibson's newest Universal thriller, which is scheduled to make its first appearance at the Dreamland theatre Monday.

The picture is an adaption of Buckleigh F. Oxford's well known novel of the same name. The full measure of romance, beauty and action that so charmed and thrilled the readers of the story is transferred to and intensified in the screen version. For location, the company journeyed to a section of the West where the remaining landmarks are rich with legends and offer numerous scars as mute testimony to the glory that once was theirs.

Tom Mix In Film Here On Monday

Tom Mix, probably most popular star of the screen for the past five years, and originator of the "new type' 'of western picture, is to be seen in his latest FBO production. "The Big Diamond Robbery," at the Princess theatre Monday.

Tony, the wonder horse, favorite of the children and grown-ups alike, is still to be seen with Mix.

Nearly 2,000,000 pounds of feathers were sent from China to the United States last year.

MYSTERY OF JUNGLE LIFE FOR CAPITOL

Central East Africa Locale of "A Dangerous Woman"

The strange, impenetrable mystery that envelops the jungle region of Central East Africa will be brought to the eyes and ears of the audience at the Capitol theatre starting Civic holiday with the showing of "A Dangerous Woman," a picture of the high standard which Paramount has established in the audible field.

Through the focus of this realistic jungle panorama the audience beholds a rugged plot, incomparable acting and free-flowing comedy.

The locale of the picture is a British outpost set in the jungle country near a Negro tribal village. Clive Brook plays the representative of his fatherland and Baclanova is his Rusian wife. Neil Hamilton is cast in the role of Brook's brother who is ensnared by the romantic wiles of his comely sister-in-law, and Leslie Fenton is another Britisher who succumbs to the witchery of this man-hunting woman who has seemingly "gone native" under the influence of Africa's mystic jungle enchantment.

The sparkling comedy parts are provided by Snitz Edwards as a native Negro chieftain and Clyde Cook as the faithful Cockney servant to Brook. These men are old-time favorites in humorous pretending.

"A Dangerous Woman" has an emotionally tumultuous climax which comes crashing through to the eyes and ears of the audience like a bull elephant through the "bush."

An eel has two separate hearts. One beats 60, the other 160 times a minute.

PASTOR PLANS VISIT EAST FOR HOLIDAY

Rev. M. L. Gregg Will Participate in Family Reunion

The minister of the Strathcona Baptist Church, Rev. Merritt L. Gregg, M.A., plans to leave Monday, August 5, on his vacation trip as far east as the Maritime Provinces and the New England states.

He has been invited to speak in some of the largest churches of his denomination, on his trip, in Toronto, Montreal and other points.

The chief attraction, however, he says that takes him so far east again so soon is to see his mother, who during the past winter and spring has been quite ill, but has considerably improved recently. All of her children, seven in all, are planning to visit her this summer. The two daughters will be from Belleisle, N.B., and Rokeby, Sask., respectively, and the five sons as follows, one a farmer at the old home, another awinner of the Victoria Cross from Montreal, another a business man from Seattle, and two ministers from Hillsboro, N.B., and Edmonton, Alta., respectively. The Strathcona pastor expects to be back the first of September.

Newfoundland Man Head of Conference

Rev. W. G. Brigden, B.A., has been elected President of the Newfoundland Conference of the United Church. The custom there is to give the honor to the one who has filled the office of secretary during the preceding year. It is expected that he will fulfil the duties with the same ability which he showed in the lesser office. The new secretary is Rev. J. G. Joyce, B.A., of Wesley Church, St. John's. A difficulty which the Church in the Ancient Colony suffers from, is the fact that students attend college in one or other of the provinces and do not return to their mother conference. There have been no ordinations for three years. A great social evil is the practice of lotteries and sweepstakes. Recently it was reported that a box of chocolates brought in $75, and a pony nearly $1,000. There is an active branch of the Women's Missionary Society. They have three representatives in the foreign field, namely, Miss Winnie Harris in North China, and Misses M. Howse and Annie Mulley in Africa. They raised last year $7,200. Dr. Fenwick has gone to England after men to man the Home Mission Fields.

TWO CHURCHES CONSECRATED STONY PLAIN

His Grace Archbishop O'Leary Officiates at Ceremonies

Sunday, July 28, was a happy and memorable occasion for the faithful of the Stony Plain district. His Grace Archbishop O'Leary consecrated and formally opened the two churches built during recent months and administered the sacrament of Confirmation.

In the morning at Stony Plain St. Philip's church was crowded to capacity, many being unable to gain admittance. High mass was sung by Rev. J. J. O'Halloran, of Castor, formerly pastor here. Rev. Edward Donohue, of St. Joseph's seminary, was master of ceremonies. The choir of the Immaculate Conception, Edmonton, under the able direction of Mrs. Joseph Nadeau, sang a beautiful mass which was greatly appreciated by all present.

Church Blessed

After the ceremony of the blessing of the church, the pastor, Rev. Father Keenan, read an address of welcome to his grace, assuring him of the loyal suport of the faithful of Stony Plain. On behalf of the German-speaking members of the flock Mr. Val Paiter read an address in which he pledged to his grace the affectionate obedience of those of the German tongue. In reply the archbishop thanked both pastor and people for their words of welcome. After confirmation was administered to sixteen children dinner was served by the ladies of the parish at Mr. Wm. Kelly's hall.

The journey was then made to Tomahawk, where the party was joined by Rev. Father Lyons.

Many Present

A large crowd was present to greet the archbishop who had come on his first visit. After the ceremony of the consecration Father Keenan read an address in which he commended the faithful for the sacrifices they had made to build the church. His grace thanked both pastor and people and after speaking to the children exhorted the parents to give their little ones a thorough, Catholic education. A class of twenty-five received confirmation. After participating in the dainty supper served by the ladies in the community hall, the return journey was made to Edmonton.

The work of construction at Stony Plain was done by Mr. Val Paiter, whom Father Keenan in his address commended highly for his thoroughness in spite of the fact that the labor was given at a sacrifice.

On Thursday, Aug. 1, his grace will give confirmation at Carvel at 10 a.m.

On Thursday, Aug. 1, his grace gave confirmation at Carvel at 10 a.m. and in the afternoon dedicated the chapel at Duffield.

On Sunday, Aug. 4, at 10 Rev. M. Schnitzler, P.P., of Spring Lake, will open a mission at Stony Plain. Services will be given in English and German. On Sunday and throughout the week evening devotions will be held at 8 and morning masses will be at 7 and 8.30.

LAY STUDENT WILL CONDUCT AT ST. FAITH'S

Canon Clough Will Substitute at Innisfree District on Sunday

Wm. H. Hughes, lay-student in charge of the Innisfree mission outpost, will take the services at St. Faith's on Sunday, August 11. Canon F. C. Clough, who is the rector of St. Faith's, will be in the Innisfree district on August 7, and will take charge of the services at Innisfree, Wilberforce, Buncrana, and Lake Alice on August 11. These districts are included in the Innisfree mission.

Brooklyn Pastor Visits Old Land

Among the visitors in England is Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, of Brooklyn. He will preach in Liverpool cathedral and also deliver the sermon at the opening of the League of Nations in Geneva. He is an Englishman by birth and was a warm defender of the British cause in the United States during the war. At present he is the official religious broadcaster, and is referred to as "preaching in the Temple not made with hands."

FAMOUS CHURCHES OF THE WORLD

Church of St. Quirinus, Neuss, Germany

There is but little about the compact, though rather ungainly little city of Neuss to interest anyone but the lover of ancient churches, though its history is very old and the development of its patronymic through Novesium, Niusa and Nova Castra bespeaks volumes for the part it has played in the past. Its origin dates back to the time of the Druses and it is mentioned by Tacitus as the winter quarters of the Roman army. The city was ravaged by Attila in 451, and by the Normans in the ninth century. Emperor Philip of Suabia captured it in 1206 and gave it to the archbishop of Cologne. A chapter of nobles was founded here in 825 and Count Evrard of Cleves erected in the first years of the thirteenth century its principal church, dedicated to St. Quirinus.

This church stands today with its great square tower looming bulkily over the house tops and is reckoned as the prototype of similar structures elsewhere. It has the almost perfect disposition and development of the double apse so frequently met with in German churches. In general its architecture is of a heavy order and the whole structure is grim, though by no means gaunt and cold. It is of the epoch when the Romanesque was being replaced nearly everywhere by the new-coming Gothic.

Though not really a massive structure the church is in every particular of a strength and solidity which rank it as a masterwork of its age. There is nothing weak and attenuated about it, and its transepts and apses make up in general effect what it lacks in actual area. The great central tower reminiscent enough of the parish churches in England, forms a great lantern which rises over the crossing in a marvelous and exceedingly practical manner, in that it affords about the only adequate means of admitting light into the interior.

The general effect of the exterior is polychromatic, which is not according to the best conceptions of ecclesiastical decorations in architecture. A twilight or a moonlight view, however, tones it down in a manner that makes the fabric appear quite the most imposing church of its size in these parts of Germany.

Lutheran Young People Meet At Stony Plain

Annual Convention Now in Progress—Will be Followed by Camp at Edmonton Beach

Lutheran young people of the Synodical Conference are meeting in Annual convention at Stony Plain, August 2-3. Delegates from local Walther leagues in Alberta and British Columbia are expected to attend. Prof. W. A. Baepler of Concordia College is president of the Alberta and British Columbia district of the Walther league. Prof. E. H. Engelbrecht, Chicago, General Field Secretary of the League, will attend the meetings. The district league maintains a Lutheran Hospice in Edmonton on 109 avenue and 96 street.

During the week following the convention Lutheran young people will meet in camp at Edmonton Beach. This gathering will be of an educational and a recreational nature. Rev. G. Raedeke of Camrose will lead in the Bible study periods. Rev. A. Appelt of Wetaskiwin will attend the meetings as representative of the Young People's Board of the Lutheran Missouri Synod. Rev. H. J. Boettcher of Edmonton will read a paper on "The Economic Possibilities of Western Canada and Their Meaning to the Church."

Scottish Churches Are Numerous

There are 163 Congregational churches in Scotland; 180 ministers, 151 being in the pastorate; and 37,882 members. From the college in Edinburgh four men graduated, all receiving calls in their native land. Ireland is celebrating the 10th anniversary of Congregationalism there. It is proposed to raise £25,000 to mark the event. Rev. Thomas Warwick of Ballynahinch is the chairman of the union.

Tell Me A Story

One fine day some hungry dogs were walking through the country when they saw a number of hides at the bottom of a stream where the tanner had put them to soak.

Now hides make excellent meals for hungry dogs. But the water was so deep that the dogs could not reach them from the bank. But the dogs were too hungry to give up easily, so they held a meeting to decide how they could obtain the hides.

They decided that the only way they could reach the hides would be to drink up all the water in the river.

Eagerly they fel lto lapping up the water as fast as they could. Although they drank and drank until they swelled up very large they could see no difference. More and more the poor, foolish dogs drank until one after the other they swelled up and burst, but the water in the river remained just as high as ever.

DO NOT TRY TO DO THE IMPOSSIBLE.

Fourth degree members of the order throughout the state have been invited to participate in the procession.

London Dock Church Has New Minister

Father Pond, an Anglo Catholic, has been appointed Vicar of St. Peter's London Docks. It is the church so well associated with the names of the late Father Wainwright and Father Polock, the latter being still active in the parish. These saintly priests of the Church of England have carried on the work among the poor and distressed as true shepherds.

Half Minute Sermons

Four hundred and thirty-seven years ago this month Columbus boarded the Santa Maria at Palos intent on proving a theory; and he left the Spanish port with the jeers, the laughter and the jibes of a taunting multitude ringing in his ears. The departure was hardly a cheerful one, and the voyage was worse, but the determination and the confidence of one man forced the venture to a successful conclusion.

There is, alas, but little more land to discover, we've mapped and measured most of it, and our geographies are about complete. But there are many other fields that are still uncharted, impenetrable swamps and desert and jungle, vast regions as dark and unknown to us now as the New World was to Europeans four centuries ago— and hardy explorers, deaf to the ridicule of the mob, as brave as any explorer that ever sailed the seas, must seek them out and chart them.

The land of Science has just been opened, the fields of Sociology are still a pleistocene jungle, the realms of jurisprudence and government but little explored and improved since the days of Magna Charta and Ignorance, Superstition and Intolerance still roam about in these lands, the earth trembling with their menacing tread, their eyes gleaming hatred and seeking whom they may devour. And these are the fields that tempt brave men.

These bold ones will appear and they, like their predecessors of the Santa Maria, will do their jobs to the tune of popular derision, do their jobs and wiggle their noses at the multitude.

Stewart, of this city, who is a member of the Board of Session at Central United, and has been for many years active in Church and Sunday School work.

One service each Sunday is the plan being carried on until the close of this month, and the plan of having the Sunday School meet at the same hour as the congregational service is meeting with good success.

SCONA CHURCH MIGHT BUILD AN ADDITION

Matter Will be Decided Prior to Pastor's Vacation

Consideration is being given by the ongregation of Strathcona Baptist church to the erection of an addition to the church, according to an announcement made on Saturday.

It is expected that final decision as to whether to proceed with construction this year or leave it over to next will be made by Monday.

The present building has done splendid service, but owing to the large increase in attendance at services and the expansion of church activities as a whole, there has been for some time a feeling that an addition was needed.

As the pastor, Rev. M. L. Gregg, is leaving on his vacation on Monday, it is expected that decision will be made before that time.

Church Pilgrims Return To Homes

The Free Church Pilgrims, who visited Canada, have returned safely. Their voyage home was clouded with fog for four days, but nothing dampened the good fellowship on board the Doric. The papers are now supplied with their experiences, which are described to have been more than satisfactory in every way. Dr. T. Albert Moore, secretary of the United Church of Canada, is given unanimous praise for his tireless energy and happy spirit as chief guide while in Canada. There was only one casualty, namely, Rev. Lewis Robertson, of the Presbyterian Church in England, who had to remain behind in Toronto, suffering from a cold.

Fool Or Martyr? The Overworked Mother

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Margaret Martin should have faced her motherhood like a business, not like a show window.

Why should a pretty, beloved, happy woman of 30, with three darling children and an adoring husband, commit suicide?

That's what Margaret Martin did. It is a sad case—it is making all of us who love her feel heartsick. What it means to Billy Martin, perhaps only the loving husband of an adorable wife, and the distracted father of Betty, Peggy and Peter can know. Betty, Peggy and Peter are aged 7, 5 and 2 respectively, and what can Billy do but marry again, and give them a stepmother, and what are their chances of getting a tender, patient, sympathetic woman in their own mother's place?

It takes an angel to raise another woman's children—especially as the particular angel Billy Martin will select will probably be young, and have babies of her own. Betty, Peggy and Peter will be quieter, less exacting children from now, and such kindness and spoiling as they get will be just so much good luck for them, not taken for granted—as the children who have mothers take kindness and spoiling.

And why did Margaret Martin commit suicide? Well she didn't do it suddenly and sensationally. She began it when her girls were tiny, and when, for some reason unknown, she decided to keep them in white. She strained and struggled with beef juice and chicken broth and spinach and socks and croup and measles for every minute of the seven years of Betty's life, and for every minute of both the others' lives.

Neighbors said that Margaret Martin was a wonderful little mother. They said that Billy was fortunate in his wife. But I don't think either statement was true.

It surely isn't good motherhood to kill yourself while your babies are so small. They are destined to forget you entirely. It surely isn't good wifehood to let spinach, cribs and clean rompers force you out of life, to leave one man and three children desolate.

The Martins didn't have much money, and one-third of it—thirty-three cents out of every dollar—Margaret spent on rent, "so that the children should have a nice environment." That meant there couldn't be a regular servant to help her, and that there couldn't be a motor-car, in which to rush off to woods or beaches on hot summer days.

The books said that children of her children's ages should have just so much scraped beef and creamed carrot and strained applesauce every few hours, and that then, in another few hours, they must have prune puree, mashed asparagus tips, whole-wheat fingers and sponge cake or ginger cookies, and Margaret took the books seriously, and would no more have thought of giving her children applesauce for three meals in succession than of starving them outright.

Mrs. Norris Says

Why should a pretty, beloved, happy woman of 30, with three darling children and an adoring husband, commit suicide?

That's what Margaret Martin did.

What can Billy do but marry again, and give them a stepmother, and what are their chances of getting a tender, patient, sympathetic woman in their own mother's place?

It takes an angel to raise another woman's children.

And why did Margaret Martin commit suicide? Well, she didn't do it suddenly and sensationally. She began it when her girls were tiny, and when, for some reason unknown she decided to keep them in white.

It surely isn't good motherhood to kill yourself while your babies are so small they are destined to forget you entirely?

Margaret, far from seeming a saint to me, seems merely stupid. Her's was a sort of stupidity that is common among women, a stupidity that has a little love behind it, to be sure, but that has a hundred times more vanity and weakness.

Margaret Martin should have faced her motherhood like a business, not like a show window. She had three small humans to raise, and two large ones to feed and shelter, on $150 a month.

It could have been done easily, simply, happily. It has been done, thousands of times.

Of course it would be nice if we all had all the money we wanted, and of course if many a young mother knew what the pains, perils, fatigues and expenses of raising three sons and a daughter were, she wouldn't marry at all.

But there's an easy, simple, dignified way of doing it, when you have let yourself in, voluntarily or involuntarily, for a few years of bottles, dishes, washings, cribs, whooping-cough.

And at the end of those few years, what haven't you got to show for them! Love, youth, amusement, absorption—in a word, living—and the delicious knowledge that you are needed, you are essential, you are the centre of a very wheel of vital interests and enterprises.

At all events, if you're in for it, play the game intelligently. Don't do to your babies what Margaret Martin did to hers.

She washed table runners and rolled butter into balls, because "we can't live like savages!" And being a gentlewoman, and adoring her husband and children, she made light of it all—laughed at cut little fingers and hoarse little coughs, and tried to be entertaining and serene and dainty, for Billy's sake, when she was ready to die of fatigue and discouragement at night.

So the flu found her an easy victim, last March. She was exhausted when it settled upon her, and she put up no fight at all. Now Billy and the children are somehow making shift without her, and neighbors are already saying that he ought to marry again, although he never will find a second saint like Margaret, for a wife.

Margaret, far from seeming a saint to me, seems merely stupid. Her's was a sort of stupidity that is common among women, a stupidity that has a little love behind it, to be sure, but that has a hundred times more vanity and weakness.

Sometimes it would almost seem to be a good thing if we could all know exactly what each other's incomes are. If there was a law—or better than a law, a custom, that every person's income should be published now and then, what these Margarets would be saved!

They can't afford an aristocratic neighborhood. They can't afford to keep servants. They can't afford heavy laundry expenses.

But their friends can. And so they have to PRETEND that everything is financially serene, and that what they can't afford to pay for, somehow miraculously does itself. All the ridiculous fussing with prunes, broth purees, minced vegetables and measured cereals that the baby books carry, isn't meant to be taken seriously. A good slice of stale whole wheat bread, with peanut butter on it, a cup—not a glass, glasses are hard washing—a cup of milk, an apple, whole, in his hand, and your child from three to ten is fed. Cereals and brown sugar, or maple sugar, or fruit, are breakfast all the year round, and a blue bowl per child, and a silver spoon, are table furnishings enough for any meal.

Children shouldn't have heavy meats, pastries, gravies, rich sweets—but neither should grownups. And the woman who thinks the only alternative is a sink-full of strainers and mashers and choppers and juice-extractors simply isn't a bright woman—that's all.

Margaret Martin should have faced her motherhood like a business, not like a show window. She had three small humans to raise, and two large ones to feed and shelter, on $150 a month.

It could have been done easily, simply, happily. It has been done, thousands of times. If it couldn't have been done, many of us would not be living now.

But it can't be done on the neighbors terms. It can't be done by trying to impress the childless woman next door, whose husband makes $300 a month. It means intelligent, courageous management, and that's what Margaret Martin didn't have. She couldn't forget what people might think. She couldn't look forward a few years, and realize that the only important thing was that they should all emerge well and sound and happy from these difficult times, into the days when they, the Martins, could afford to keep up with the Joneses.

A little $25 cottage in some quiet, unfashionable part of town, a garden in which the children would amuse themselves all day long, some of the practical ticking over garments that save mothers hours and hours at the tub, and sensible meals, almost all served on the porch steps—and Margaret Martin would be a living, busy, beloved creature today.

Instead Margaret chose a $50 apartment, cooped her babies up there, had to dress, and re-dress them, every time they went out, fretted over their clothing and their food.

And as a result, we who loved her are awaiting the day when Billy will tell us that a man can't manage three small children, and that he is going to Marry Elsie White.

Elsie is very pretty, intelligent, excitable. She had to give up teaching music because the children made her so nervous. I have only once seen her with the Martin children, and then she remarked very pleasantly that Billy spoiled them completely, especially Peggy, and that she, Elsie, thought that children ought to be kept in their place.

So that instead of thinking of poor Margaret as a martyr saint, there is some little excuse for thinking of her as an unintelligent woman who betrayed her children into the hands of this stranger.

Of course it would be nice if we all had all the money we wanted, and if spinach chopped itself and white rompers romped into the tub and out again of their own accord. And of course if many a young mother knew what the pains, perils, fatigues and expenses of raising three sons and a daughter were, she wouldn't marry at all.

But there's an easy, simple, dignified way of doing it, when you have let yourself in, voluntarily or involuntarily, for a few years of bottles, dishes, washing, cribs, whooping-cough.

And at the end of those few years, what haven't you got to show for them! Love, youth, amusement, absorption—in a word, living—and the delicious knowledge that you are needed, you are essential, you are the centre of a very wheel of vital interests and enterprise.

These things are worth some billions of bridge scores, receipts from beauty parlors, and cancelled travelers' checks. Bridge, idleness, beauty culture, matinees—all very well in the twenties and thirties.

But the forties come racing along, too. And then there's nothing like High School Commencements, youthful confidences on a summer morning, youthful entertainments on a winter night, love affairs beginning again, babies once more on the way—and "Mother" the heart and soul of it all.

At all events, if you're in for it, play the game intelligently. Don't do to your babies what Margaret Martin did to hers.

Milady Beautiful

By LOIS LEEDS

THE SLEEVELESS MODE

There is something very youthful and jaunty in the sleeveless daytime frocks that have become so popular this season. Milady's arms need not be white to be considered beautiful since the advent of the suntan vogue, but they must be evenly tinted and shapely. The arm that is pale and flabby at the top with skin below the elbow discolored and coarse-grained is not a beauty asset.

The flabby upper arm is particularly unlovely. The skin falls into ugly folds at the armhole when the arms are hanging relaxed, so that one feels that it should be allowed to take refuge behind a graceful bit or drapery. Both exercise and massage treatments are helpful in bringing firmness and beauty to such arms. Almost any arm exercise will help replace the flaccid muscles with firm, supple ones. Here is a simple set of movements that can be done every day: Stand or sit erect with arms held out straight in front at the shoulder level. Stretch the arms well and tense the muscles. Keeping the upper arms motionless, slowly bend the arms at the elbows, then bring the right hand to the left shoulder and the left hand to the right shoulder. Then slowly draw the arms apart, keeping elbows bent until they are out at each side of the body at shoulder level. Then fling the arms out straight and swing them back as far as you can, trying to make the shoulder blades meet. Relax and repeat the exercise ten to twenty times.

After the exercise period is a good time for the massage. Cleanse the skin with soap and warm water, rinse and dry. Now rub a little cream or olive oil on the palm of your left hand and with it massage your right arm. Give a deep, rotary massage movement for five minutes, your hand cuped around the arm. Now use a patter or your fingers to give a stimulating or slaping massage. Wipe off the cream and sponge with a skin lotion. If the elbow, hand and forearm are darker than the upper arm you may either use a suntan lotion to darken the later or you may bleach the lower part.

A Bleach-pack is usually more effective than a lotion because it keeps moist longer. In making one for the arms mix the bleaching lotion of your choice with cornmeal or with fuller's earth and spread it on the skin which has been thoroughly cleansed and steamed with hot towels several times. Buttermilk is a useful bleach although it is slow in action. A buttermilk pack given daily for three or four weeks will do much toward bleaching darkened arms. Another simple bleach may be made of one part of glycerine and two parts of lemon juice mixed into a paste with fuller's earth.

Farmer Brown's Boy Lunches on Berries

By THORNTON BURGESS
(Copyright)

When things go wrong in spite of you
To smile's the best thing you can do—
To smile and say "I'm migthy glad
They are no worse; they're not so bad!"

That is what Farmer Brown's Boy said when he found that Buster Bear had stolen the berries he had worked so hard to pick and then run off with his pail. You see, Farmer Brown's Boy is learning to be something of a philos-o-pher, one of those persons who accept bad things cheerfully and right away see how they are better than they might have been. When he had first heard some one in the bushes where he had hidden his pail of berries he had been very sure that it was one of the cows or young cattle who live in the Old Pasture during the summer. He had been afraid that they might stupidly kick over the pail and spill the berries, and he had hurried to drive whoever it was away. It hadn't entered his head that it could be anybody who would eat those berries.

When he had yelled to scare away the unwelcome visitor, and Buster Bear had suddenly appeared, struggling to get off the pail which had caught over his head, Farmer Brown's Boy had been too frightened to even move. Then he had seen Buster tear away through the brush even more frightened than he was, and right away his courage had begun to come back.

"I guess someone else was hungry, too," he muttered.

"If he is so afraid of me I guess I needn't be afraid of him," said he. "I've lost my berries, but it is worth it to find out that he is afraid of me. There are plenty more on the bushes and all I've got to do is to pick them. It might be worse."

He walked over to the place where the pail had been and then he remembered that when Buster ran away he had carried the pail with him hanging about his neck. He whistled. It was a comical little whistle of chagrin, as he realized that he had nothing in which to put more berries if he picked them.

"It's worse than I thought," cried he. "That bear has cheated me out of the berry pie my mother promised me." He began to laugh as he thought of how funny Buster Bear had looked with the pail about his neck, and then because, you know, he is learning to be a philosopher, he once more repeated. "It might have been worse. Yes, indeed, it might have been worse. That bear might have tried to eat me instead of the berries. I guess I'll go eat that lunch I left back by the spring, and then I'll go home. I can pick berries some other day."

Chuckling happily over Buster Bear's great fright, Farmer Brown's Boy tramped back to the spring where he had left two thick sandwiches on a flat stone when he started to save his pail for berries.

"My, but those sandwiches will taste good," thought he. "I'm glad they are big and thick. I never was hungrier in my life. Hullo!"

This he exclaimed right out loud for he had just come in sight of the flat stone where the sandwiches should have been, and they were not there. No, sir, there wasn't a crumb left of those two thick sandwiches. You see, Old Man Coyote had found htme and gobbled them up while Farmer Brown's Boy was away.

But Farmer Brown's Boy didn't know anything about Old Man Coyote. He rubbed his eyes and stared everywhere, even up in the trees, as if he thought those sandwiches might be hanging up there. They had disappeared as completely as if they never had been, and Old Man Coyote had taken care to leave no trace of his visit. Farmer Brown's Boy gaped foolishly this way and that way. Then instead of growing angry a slow smile stole over his freckled face.

"I guess some one else was hungry too," he muttered. "Wonder who is was? Guess this Old Pasture is no place for me today. I'll fill up on berries and then I'll go home."

So Farmer Brown's Boy made his lunch on blueberries and then rather sheepishly he started for home to tell of all the strange things that had happened to him in the Old Pasture. Two or three times as he trudged along he stopped to scratch his head thoughtfully.

"I guess," said he at last, "that I'm not so smart as I thought I was, and I've got a lot to learn yet." Which also shows that he is becoming something of a phil-os-o-pher.

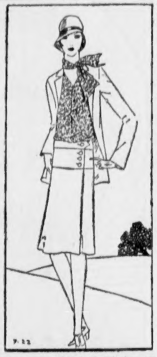
The Mirror of the Mode

By MARY MARSHALL



This smart white linen suit is worn with a printed silk blouse in blue and old blue. The white hat has a band of blue.

The trim linen jacket suits worn with tuck-in separate blouses have come to give us a welcome change in street apparel—after the weeks and weeks when everyone seemed to be wearing flowered chiffon. And in the days that remain of summer we shall doubtless see more and more of these convenient jacket costumes. If your summer wardrobe stands in need of replenishing, you could not do better at this late date than to buy, make or have made a jacket costume of this sort. There are very smart suits of black linen, which have been worn by smart women with crisp ruffled or jabot blouses of white linen. They are also seen in pastel colors and are especially attractive in white, when instead of the all-white blouse one may get a more interesting effect from a blouse of figured silk.

This midsummer vogue for the linen suit indicates, it seems to me, that after much hesitation American women are following the lead of smartly dressed French women in favoring the two-piece suit and separate blouse for street wear. There is every reason to believe that the two-piece suit will be much more generally accepted here this autumn than it was last spring.

It is rather odd that Americans have been so slow to adopt the fashion for the tuck-in blouse—because several seasons ago there was a tendency on the part of certain flappers to adopt this mode of wearing the separate blouse—even before Paris dressmakers had begun to make use of the revival. Now—as everyone knows—the tuck-in blouse is much more often seen in France than here, and leading designers have made use of the tuck-in blouse effect in many of their smartest new dresses.

What's What

By HELEN DECIE

"R. M.," who is spending the summer at an Eastern resort, has been invited by Mrs. Z. to a yachting party lasting four days. Miss M. has only an average summer wardrobe with her, including a sweater sport suit. Will the tan sport costume do, with one afternoon gown, one evening dress and a long coat?

The selection mentioned will "do", but, if R. M. can afford it, she ought to have (instead of the sweater suit) a yachting costume, which she will find very smart and comfortable ashore or at sea. It need not be expensive. A bright navy-blue double-breasted jacket with brass or pearl buttons accompanies an ivory-white pleated skirt. Lightweight flannel is the most satisfactory fabric for a yachting suit.

The beret (French cap) matches the jacket in color, and may be of the same material, or knit with navy-blue yarn. The medium-heeled white oxfords or pumps art trimmed with blue or black leather. Washable white gloves are best for deck wear.

Summer School Students Entertain Staff At Pretty Beach Dance At University

Last Function of Season Attended By Department of Education Students Who Finish Courses This Week-end

The most enjoyable affair of the summer school session was the students' annual reception to the staff, which was held in Athabasca Hall on Friday evening.

In anticipation of forthcoming holidays, the reception took the form of a beach dance, for which the dining hall was appropriately decorated.

A delightful effect of cool, blue water over which numerous yachts plied their pleasant way and gulls soared gaily was a most artistic wall decoration. The orchestra setting and the various rendezvous were imitative of striped beach tents, while festoons of brightly colored balloons were the trees. By means of colored lights a charming sunset effect was obtained.

In the Gym., where myriads of candles, flowers and ferns were used as decoration, a delicious supper was served.

An orchestra rendered a splendid dance program, being relieved during the first supper by the summer school orchestra.

The patronesses were Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Kerr, Mrs. McNally, and Miss Fisher.

Members of the executive are: President, Mr. W. P. Wagner; vice-president, Miss Mathews; secretary, Miss Nelson; treasurer, Mr. Fleming.

An Aged Dependent Mother Resides With Her Son While Father Lives With Daughter

Women's Applications For Old Age Pensions Reveal Interesting Facts

An aged mother who is dependent on some of her children for support generally lives with a son, while an enderly father finds a home with his daughter, according to many of the applications for Old Age Pensions which have been received since the new act went into force. Exactly why these mother and son and father and daughter arrangements are the most popular is not explained by the stereotyped questions and answers on the application forms.

Is it because mother does not like to hand over the reins of authority to her daughter and prefers living with her daughter-in-law, or is it because a son feels more responsibility for his mother's welfare than his sister does? There must be reasons for these arrangements, they are not just chance as they appear repeatedly in the answers regarding residence of the aged people, applying for pensions.

Three Score and Ten

There is at least one place where it pays a woman to be quite frank and admit every year of her age and that is the Old Age Pension office. It is quite alright for Grandma to wear her dangling jet earings and that floppy grey hat that makes her look just over sixty when she dresses up to make the trip to the Pension Board office, but she has to be able to prove that she is every day of seventy or the trip is in vain. It is surprising the number of women who do not know their age or birthplace. Very frequently they have lost their birth and marriage certificates, the family bible and every document which would prove their age. The officials at the Pension Board office, however, are very kind and have unlimited patience and do all in their power to assist the applicants in filling out the forms. One elderly lady, who applied for a pension, had lost all proof of her exact age. However she had the birth certificate of her son who was born in 1870 so this was sufficient proof that she had passed the three score and ten mark.

It is for this reason that the officials prefer to have the applicants fill in the forms at the office for so often when the form is sent out and the elderly woman fills it in with the advice of all her relatives and friends it is usless as it does not contain the three things essential and necessary to get a pension. To get a pension from the province of Alberta a woman must be seventy years of age, have lived in the Dominion for twenty years and in the province for five, and have no means of support.

One Hundred Descendants

Applicants for pension do not always come alone for quite a number of married couples have applied. Neither are they always persons who are all alone in the world, for one couple, who applied, have seventy-five grandchildren and twenty-five great-grandchildren, as well as sons and daughter who are living.

All Nationalities

The history of the women of Alberta is written in these application forms. Women who came West in the first days of the railway, who settled on homesteads with their husbands, miles from doctors and even far away from their nearest neighbor, and have gone through many of the hardships of pioneering, will now be given a pension by the province which they have served. A happy girlhood in the British Isles, or in Europe, and then emigration to a land of promise and rearing a family in Canada is the story told by many other forms. Many native-born Canadian women have applied for pensions as well as those born in other countries.

More Bachelors and Widows

Many more men than women applied for the old age pensions in the first year they were given in British Columbia, so it will be interesting to see if the same will happen in this province. Single women over seventy years of age, who might perhaps be expected to need some assistance, were very few in numbers, while the elderly bachelors applied in three times the number.

Yet the widows who applied for pensions outnumbered the widowers by two to one, so that it would seem that an unmarried woman is more successful in providing for her old age than her married sister. In the Pacific province it was found that forty per cent. of those applying for the pension were Canadian by birth, while practically every other country in the world was represented among the other sixty per cent.

Engagements

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Flack announce the engagement of Helen Ruth Staunton, only daughter of Mrs. Flack and the late John Staunton, to Mr. Elmyr Hewston Stutchbury, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Stutchbury. The marriage to take place on September 4.

* * *

Mr. J. T. Jones announces the engagement of his daughter, Sophronia, to Mr. Lamirh John Chaney, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Chaney, the marriage to take place the latter part of August.

Tea Talk

Miss Lenora Hall and Miss Agnes McFarlane are being congratulated on having passed their ground school examinations for flying last week. Although classes at the airdrome start at 5:30 sharp these summer mornings, the early hour does not discourage the young Edmonton girls who are taking the course. The mysteries of controlling surfaces and air pressure are well known to these flying enthusiasts who don white coveralls to learn the parts of the machine. The other Edmonton girls who have already passed the ground school exams are Miss Florence Crang, Miss Marjorie Chauvin and Miss Aileen Marshall.

One of the most popular and charming members of the Canadian Women's Press Club, who attended the recent triennial held in Saint John was Mrs. Gertrude S. Pringle of Toronto. Mrs. Pringle is well known in Edmonton, having been a popular member of the younger set here in pre-war days. Miss Gertrude Seton Thompson, as Mrs. Pringle, was the editor of the first district Women's Page of the Edmonton Bulletin. A few years ago Mrs. Pringle resumed writing and is now one of the eminent Canadian free lances. She is a regular contributor to the Mail and Empire in Toronto and her articles frequently appear in MacLeans and other Canadian Magazines.

Mrs. Pringle is a niece of Mr. Ernest Seton Thompson, the noted nature writer.

Edmonton War Veteran Weds In England

Summer brings week-end guests to almost every household.

Careful planning of each meal and a general plan of activities will do much to make these visits pleasant. For this definite planning of meals down to the last detail means that the hostess gains several extra hours of leisure with her guest.

Begin arrangements early for week-end parties and write down plans in black and white. Replenish staple supplies early in the week. Look over silver and linen.

Plan Six Meals

Most week-end visits begin some time on Saturday and end Monday morning. Two meals for Saturday, three Sunday and Monday breakfast must be planned. The meals all must be planned in accordance with the manner in which the time is to be spent. If golf or church are part of the Sunday morning program, an early breakfast with a hearty dinner at two o'clock and supper at seven would be wanted. While a long Sunday morning nap would bring the light meal at noon and a hearty dinner at six o'clock in the evening.

Sandwich bread, dainty cookies, salad dressing, cake or cream-puff shells, meat loaves, potato chips and jellied dishes all can be prepared the day before the guest arrives. Some of the concoctions can be made as early as Thursday.

Salad Dressing

The following rule for salad dressing will make a little more than two cups. The dressing will keep on ice almost indefinitely and is excellent with fruit or vegetables. It can be used with meat or fish if they are marinated in French dressing for two hours before combining.

Four tablespoons melted butter or oil, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon powdered mustard, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 3 tablespoons sugar, 8 tablespoons vinegar, 4 tablespoons water, yolks 2 eggs, 1 cup whipping cream.

Mix and sift flour, sugar, salt, mustard and pepper. Add to melted butter and stir until perfectly smooth. Add vinegar and water and cook, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Remove from fire and stir in unbeaten egg yolks. When cool stir in cream whipped until firm. If a tartar dressing is wanted lemon juice can be added just before the egg yolks.

The Man From Texas

The Bulletin's Daily Short Story From Real Life.

By ROBERTA M. YATES

Julie had a good racket. No question of it. You get more money as a night club hostess and you last longer than in the chorus, out of which Julie had graduated ten years ago. But even as a hostess you don't last for ever. A wise woman picks herself off a god husband and feathers a nest for her old age.

That's what Steve Kober kept telling Julie along with the suggestion that he be the husband and provide the nest, which he could do amply, being one of the bosses of the uptown beer running gang.

But Julie tossed her head and applied more henna to hide the streaks of gray and filled in those bothersome wrinkles about her eyes with cold cream, and assured herself that she looked 25—well, 30—but certainly not forty. And why should she tie herself to a mere bootlegger who wore a derby and smoked black cigars out of the corner of his mouth?

Wasn't she still Julie Ellis and wasnt she bowling them over at the Hot Toddy club? And when she tied it would be to a Wall Street millionaire, or a western oil millionaire or some sort of millionaire. She inclined toward the westerner, having vague dreams of a ranch surrounded by cowboys and open spaces over which she would be the queen.'

But the millionaire had an irritating way of choosing the sweet young things whom Julie introduced. Marjie Miles had given up her little song and dance at the Hot Toddy for an estate in Westchester. Rose Curarn had paused long enough in the Charleston to marry a gent who owned half of Oklahoma

The men liked Julie; they laughed with her and at her. They pronounced her the cat's meow as an entertainer, but they fell in love with the Marjies and Roses, who hadn't been out of the cradle long enough to stop lisping

Steve Kober pursued her faithfully for three seasons, which is a record on Broadway. He even offered to give up his derby and his cigar

"I'm not quite a millionaire, Julie," he argued, "but I spend money freer than a lot of them do."

Is Not Julie's Dish

"You're a bootlegger, Steve, and what would I be to tie myself to a man that's likely to get the works in the next beer war?" said Julie. "No, when I march down the aisle I want a little peace and security waiting at the other side of the altar."

"I been thinking of settling down, Julie," he said. "I got enough salted away. And I'm getting along. I'm past fifty. . . . . You're getting along too."

'Who said I was?' she snapped. "You'll know I'm dead when you see a lily in my hand, not until."

That was the situation when Jim Wayburn breezed into the Hot Toddy club. Jim had a face as wide open as Texas, from which he hailed. He wore his dress suit as easily as a mastodon might a circus tent

The minute he saw Julie he asked the waiter for an introduction, which was simple enough to get, since it was Julie's business to meet people at the club, make them feel at home and see that they had a good time.

> The Cast of Characters in "The Man From Texas."
> JULIE, a night club hostess.
> STEVE KOBER, a beer runner in love with Julie.
> JIM WAYBURN, the man who says he is from Texas.
> NED ANDERSON, Wayburn's friend and self-styled banker.

"You're a grand girl," said Jim Wayburn.

She certainly attended to business where Jim Wayburn was concerned. She left his table on that first evening only long enough to introduce the little girls who sang and danced. She devoted so much of her time to him that Ike Stanley, the manager complained that she was neglecting the other customers. Whereupon Julie pointed out that Jim Wayburn was a new customer and a heavy spender. Hadn't he shelled out $50 without a murmur for a dab of club sandwich and a pint or so of ginger ale?

The next day he sent her four dozen white roses.

"Can you beat it? Sending me white roses," tittered Julie. "Isn't that just like an inocent guy from Texas?"

But in her heart she was pleased Hearts along Broadway are softer and more sentimental than is commonly supposed, and Julie's heart was no exception. Jim Wayburn made her think of a white ranch house and a lot of green trees vaguely mixed up with a sandy desert; he made her think about peace and security.

On the second night he confided that they'd struck oil on his place a year or so ago; that this was his first visit to New York; that he thought Julie was a knockout; and that he was thirsty.

"It's hard to get the stuff here," Julie sympathized. "You're supposed to bring it on your hip. But maybe I can get Ike to serve you some. He's awful cagy."

"You're a grand girl," said Jim Wayburn, fumbling awkwardly with her bediamonded hand.

A lot of men had fumbled quite efficiently with Julie's hand, but none of them had given her the kick his big freckled paw did

"I'll speak to Ike," she said and flashed across the floor

But Ike was adamant. He wasn't serving liquor—not with all this raid stuff going on. He didn't know this guy Wayburn

She caught sight of Steve Kober's derby hat slinking behind a velvet curtain.

"I'll bet Steve told you not to," she stormed. "It'd be like him . . . . . jealous, that's all he is."

"Maybe Steve did,' said Ike "He's a good friend of mine and he knows his onions."

"He's a bum, that's what he is. I'll tell him off!" Julie pulled aside the velvet curtains and looked into Steve Kober's impassive and ugly face. "What do you mean by butting into my business?" she demanded.

"It ain't Ike's business to sell liquor and he ain't doing it," said Steve

"You know the cellar's full You know he pulls it out sometimes specially. Why can't he do it for me unless you told him not to?"

A Rich Suitor
Sugars His Path

Steve shrugged and walked away leaving her storming. The gossip of Jim Wayburn's courting of Julie Ellis soon flighted from bulb to bulb through the Mazda belt. He began sending her orchids having learned something apparently from New York. He appeared every evening at the Hot Toddy club. Along toward the end of the first week he got confidential about how lonely he was all by himself on his ranch with no wife on whom to spend his money

Julie grew confidential, too. She admitted that after a while a girl grew tired of Broadway and wanted to settle down with a good husband far from the haunts of jazz

'I suppose it would take a lot to make you give up all this though," said Jim Wayburn, with a glance at the polished floor, crowded with dancers and the tables crowded with checks. "You got a swell business built up here. It ain't every girl can have her own night club and all the popularity you got."

"It's not my club," Julie confessed honestly. "It belongs to Ike."

"But I'll bet you get a good split."

"I do well enough," she admitted "But—but—I wouldn't mind giving it up so much "

However, he did not pursue the subject further that evening and on the next he introduced Ned Anderson, a friend of his from Houston. Anderson, it appeared, was a banker, also on his first visit to New York. He was much interested in the Hot Toddy club and its management

"I'd like to start a club like this in Houston," he said. "It'd go over big if we had a great little girl like Miss Ellis down there to give us a hand But I'm scared they're too dry down that way. We'd get raided."

"It's dry enough here," grumbled Wayburn. "You can't get a drink "

Ned Anderson was surprised "I thought you could get something in any of these places," he said.

"I'll fix it," said Julie. So he sent a waiter to her own apartment to bring a bottle of Scotch. "This is on me, not the management," she said, and the men drank the health of a swell sport

The Blow Falls!
Julie's the Victim

All this time Steve Kober glowered at them from the shelter of the velvet curtain, but he confined himself to glowering. He made no effort to win Julie back. He seemed to realize that he had lost her. Ike Stanley almost decided to lose her too

Julie's popularity as a hostess was built on the fact that she was nice to every one. She'd soon lose her following, Ike argued, if she persisted in devoting herself to one table and ignoring all her old friends. He didn't hire her to entertain one big goof from Texas alone

And every one wondered just how long it would be before Jim Wayburn carried Broadway's popular hostess back to his Texas ranch. Julie blushed under all her cold cream and paint when they teased her about it

He's one grand guy," she confided "I don't know but what he might persuade me to give up the free and single "

The blow fell upon Julie and Broadway alike with the devastating unexpectedness of lightning from a summer sky. It stunned every one—except Steve Kober. He took it without a quiver, not even moving his cigar from one corner of his mouth to the other It was as though Steve had expected it. Julie telephoned to him at 10 a.m. an unheard of time for Julie to be up and telephoning.

"Come over right away, Steve," she pleaded hysterically. "Something awful's happened. I got to talk to you."

"Sure," said Steve. "I'm on my way."

Julie was pacing the floor in a negligee of golden lace; tears had streaked the makeup from her face so that she looked her age and her eyes were wide and frightened

"That dirty rat!" she wailed. "That double-crossing bum. That—" and a number of less printable epithets.

"Who?" asked Steve mildly.

"Jim Wayburn. Do you know who he is—was—what he did, I mean? O my God, Steve, I can't bear it. And me to be such a fool. Do you know—"

"Sure, I knew all the time," said Steve calmly. "That's why O wouldn't let you sell him liquor. He wanted to pin a sale on you."

When a Wise
Woman Gets Stung

"You knew?" Her lips gaped open "Why didn't you tell me? Why didn't you warn me? Now he's got me up for being a nuisance. Him and that side-kick of his, Anderson, both swearing I was part owner in the Hot Toddy club, the black liars. And I got to go to court like a common thief "

"They ain't got a thing to convict you on," Steve assured her. "All you will get is a lot of publicity."

Julie crumpled into tears. "I don't want publicity. I don't want anything except to be let alone," she wept "And I'm so disappointed. I was sort of planning on a quiet home life and I'm tired and—and old, Steve."

Steve let her lay her overbright henna head on his shoulder. "And I've bought a farm upstate."

"Would—would you forgive me Steve, for being mean to you on account of that dirty, double-crossing yap?"

"Would I? Say ask me. Maybe I was mean to you, too, Julie, not tipping you off, but I thought if you got good and stung, you'd take another look at poor old Steve."

Would I?" said Julie. "Ask me."

Skimping on the Present in Order to Lay Up Good Things for the Future May Prove a Boomerang When the Future Actually Comes And Finds Us Too Tired to Enjoy It

When is economy economy, and when is it rank wastefulness?

Of course, every one above the grade of a moron is fully aware of the necessity of living within his income and laying up something for the rainy day that is sure to come to us all. Sickness, bad luck in business, old age are misfortunes that none escape, and when these befall us, miserable, indeed, is our lot if we have to add to them penury and dependence upon others.

But we can buy even the umbrella to protect us against the storms of life at too high a price. We can pay for it more than it is worth. We can invest so much in it that it impoverishes us and becomes an extravagance instead of a proof of our thrift.

You see a frequent illustration of this in the men who take out so much insurance that they kill themselves working to keep up their policies, and who never seem to realize that even in dollars and cents they are worth more to their families alive than dead

Another common example of this is to be found in the men who are so anxious to get rich quick that they never take a vacation, or indulge themselves in any pleasure and recreation. They boast that they haven't been away from their offices a single day in 10 years; that they have no interest outside of their business, and that they don't waste their energies and thoughts on such frivolous matters as golf and fishing and hunting and travelling.

You cannot convince such a man, not even when he breaks down with nervous prostration in his 40s, that it is his industry that has bankrupted him, and that if he had worked less he could have worked longer, and that he would have done better and more profitable work. But it is the truth The man who used up all of his energy and strength by incessant labor in his youth is just as much a prodigal as if he had spent his whole fortune on one big debauch

The men who are still at the head of their affairs in their 80s are the men who have varied their work with play, and who have cultivated outside interests. From time to time they have dropped their work and forgotten it, and when they came back to it, rested and refreshed in mind and body, they were able to tackle their problems from a new angle and to put fresh pep and enthusiasm in their work. There is no truer saying than that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy.

Still another illustration of the way in which economy may become a boomerang we see daily in those people who have denied themselves everything they wanted at the time they could have enjoyed it, in order that they might have these pleasures at some future day that never arrived, for by the time they were ready to indulge themselves they had lost their desires. They had got their nuts when they had no teeth to crack them

You see people who love beautiful surroundings and who could afford a nice home, but they put off building it until the children are grown, and then when they get it built the children are married and gone.

You see people who long to travel, and they might as well go as not and fill their minds with the memories of the wonderful things they have seen, but they keep putting it off and putting it off until they are too old and decrepit to get a single kick out of it when they do at last start out on a tour

You see people saving and pinching every penny, denying themselves every comfort and indulgence to scrape together a fortune, and when they get it, it will buy them nothing that they want. It is nothing but some scraps of paper in a bank box for their heirs to fight over when they are gone. They have wasted all the joys and pleasures of life trying to save. What extravagance!

Women are notoriously unable to tell when economy is economy and when it is sheer wastefulness, and some of their most flagrant sins of extravagance are committed in the name of thrift. In proof whereof consider the stock pot, the fetish of the saving housewife, into which goes, along with the scraps from the table, $10 worth of work and watching in order to save 15 cents' worth of soup meat Behold also the bread pudding in which by dint of labor and eggs and milk and butter and sugar and spices and raisins a few stale slices of bread are salvaged at great cost

And no women beat louder upon the cymbals in calling attention to their economies than those thrifty sisters who boast that they painted an entire set of furniture themselves, or cleaned their rugs instead of hiring it done, even though it brought a spell of sickness upon them that necessitated doctors' and nurses' bills that came to 10 times the money they saved.

Of course, a woman counts it unto herself for righteousness when she denies herself good clothes, but even this is not always good economy, because in a way a woman is an index of her husband's prosperity or his failure, and if she is shabby it is a bad advertisement for him. I well recall once hearing a doctor urging his penurious and frumpy looking wife to buy some pretty frocks.

"When you go about ill-dressed you do me a great injustice," he said, "for people are bound to think one of two things: either that I am so mean and stingy that I will not buy my wife decent clothes, or else that I am such a poor doctor that I have no patients and don't make enough money to dress you properly. Don't think you are helping me by saving every cent. You are ruining me by it."

And certainly many a woman's economy has cost her a divorce, which is no saving any way you figure it out. For many a woman has overworked until she made herself nervous and peevish and been too tired to play with her husband. Many a wife has scrimped on the beauty shop and let herself get old and ugly before her time Many a wife has worn ugly hand-me-downs because they were cheap, instead of frilly chiffons, and as the result of her economies lost her husband to some woman who had sense enough to see that it was a profitable investment for a woman always to keep herself looking like a good bargain to a man

So the question is still unanswered: When is economy economy, and when is it rank wastefulness? DOROTHY DIX

SHOPPING IN CROWDED STORES HARD ON CHILD

Mrs. L. G. P. writes: "Don't you agree with me that mothers are all too inconsiderate of their children on shopping tours? Twice last week I saw harassed mothers slap their children, forgetting that if they were tired, the poor little youngsters with less endurance were doubly so

"How uninteresting to a child are the crowds around bargain counters! His view consists mostly of legs, which he must dodge, and he is yanked along and slapped if he rebels

Some of the mothers should try walking in a crowd on hands and knees to see how it feels to be down where the tiny folks are

It seems to me, if there is shopping to be done and it is necessary to take children that mothers should plan exactly what they must buy, try to know just where they can get it and choose a time of day when there will be few shoppers

"If mothers knew what a poor opinion onlookers have, and the impression they give of ineffectual home training, there would be less public slapping. What do you think?"

Answer: Just as you do. Necessary shopping could be accomplished more quickly early in the morning, or even better, the children could be left in the care of some obliging neighbor and this favor returned by the mother when the neighbor wishes to go shopping.

Just actions display the mother's lack of imagination, as well as her lack of training. She doesn't put herself in the child's place. If she thinks of onlookers, and I doubt if she does, she probably feels that they are in sympathy with her

If she is the slapping type of mother, she has no feeling about it. It becomes almost as unconscious a habit as breathing. Let the poor child annoy her in any way and whack goes her hand. It flies out like a snarling dog's paw. Perhaps she thinks all mothers treat their children in this manner, and if she knew better she might do differently. She is, in truth, "under-privileged" in more ways than one. She never sees better and more effectual methods of control and so doesn't know they [illegible]

In my work I see lots of babies and mothers. There is a certain type of mother who starts slapping her baby when he is so tiny that his movements belong almost in the reflex stage. If he cries when weighed or measured, she says: "Shut up," and strikes at him. One feels pretty helpless in the face of such exhibitions. How can one help a mother who never for a moment questions her own methods?

New Health for Tired-out Women

Found in the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make

Anaemia comes on gradually, beginning with langour, indisposition to mental or bodily exertion, irritability and a feeling of fatigue. Later come the palpitation of the heart, headaches, frequent backaches and often disturbed indigestion and an inability to obtain rest at night. Cases of this kind, if neglected, become more serious, but if taken in time there is no need to worry. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which are free from any harmful or habit-forming drug, are just the tonic needed to remedy this wretched state of health. These pills actually make the rich red blood that stimulates and strengthens every organ and nerve in the body. Thus strength and activity return, the appetite improves and restful sleep is had. What Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can and will do is shown by the case of Mrs. D. B. Fanning, Seal Harbor N.S., who says:—"I was in a badly run-down condition. I was pale, my appetite was very poor, and the least exertion would leave me completely tired out. In fact I was hardly able to do much work about the house. I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after taking a few boxes can truthfully say I had gained greatly in health and strength and was able to go about my work with no sign of the former weakness. I cheerfully recommend them to all others who may be in a run-down condition

You can get the pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FIELD CROPS CONTEST NOW PLANNED HERE

Cups Donated Throughout Alberta for Farm Competition

Donation of cups for field crops competitions throughout Alberta by the department of agriculture, the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce and the Calgary Kiwanis Club was announced on Friday by Hon. George Hoadley, minister of agriculture and health.

The Minister announced that the department of agriculture would donate a grand challenge trophy to be won by the farmer having the best field of wheat in standing crop, in any of the field crops and good farms competitions held in various sections of the province.

There are 20 such competitions being held at the more important agricultural centres spread from Athabasca in the north to Raymond in the south. These events are being sponsored by local Boards of Trade, agricultural fairs societies and service clubs.

The department donated a trophy last year which was won by P. J. Rock, Morrin.

Judging is due to commence immediately, all of which will be under the direction of the field crops branch, department of agriculture.

The Edmonton Chamber of Commerce trophy will be for the best field of wheat entered in competition in Northern Alberta, that is roughly from Red Deer north.

The Calgary Kiwanis Club trophy will be for the best field of wheat entered from Southern Alberta.

The winners of the Edmonton and Calgary trophies will then enter the final judging for the provincial trophy.

It is expected that competition will be unusually keen this year and that some excellent samples will be entered.

Rolla District To Try Combines

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

ROLLA, Aug. 3.—Rolla, B.C., in the Peace River block, is going to use combines this year and the first purchase of this type of machinery has been made by Mr. Miller. This is the first combine to be sold in the Peace River block in the province of B.C. The combine purchased by Mr. Miller is a Massey Harris. The Rolla Holt agency also expects to have combines in the field.

The crops here are excellent and harvesting will begin shortly. Large crops are again expected.

Among recent developments in Rolla is a large implement warehouse erected by H. G. Atkinson, a watch making and repair shop by Mr. Walker. W. H. Metzer has installed an oxy-acetylene welding department in his blacksmith shop.

The Rolla hotel is making extensive improvements and adding more rooms.

The district is going in extensively for tractors and power machinery and the dealers have made many sales this year. Consequently there has been a tremendous amount of breaking.

Mr. [illegible] of the [illegible] Motor company flew over Rolla last Monday morning and dropped messages in which he stated that the Rolla district crops looked better than anything he had seen in the Peace River country. Motor roads both to this district and throughout the country are excellent and car loads of settlers are moving in fast.

Visitor Is Pleased With High Quality Of Western Fairs

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

WINNIPEG, Aug. 3.—The "A" Class Fairs of Western Canada, with their many angles, are making a wonderful contribution to the education of the agriculturalist, the merchant and the livestock man, said J. M. McKay, general agricultural agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, on his return from a visit to the exhibitions at Edmonton, Calgary, Saskatoon and Regina. The exhibitions are bringing them more closely together, and in this country where distances are so great the contribution is so large that no business man can afford to neglect the fair which is largely of a provincial type and one of the sources which keep him in touch with agricultural conditions throughout the entire land.

Mr. McKay reports that the livestock exhibits were larger and of better quality than ever before, both of beef and dairy herds. Sheep exhibits have demonstrated that Western Canada is now taking a very active interest in sheep breeding. Swine, poultry and the exhibits that go to make up the farm auxiliaries were such that judges from the east were amazed at the quality of the animals shown.

All Quiet on the Western Front!

BY ERICH MARIA REMARQUE

Now it can be told—the truth about the war!

Not from the lips of a be-ribboned dugout strategist—not from the tricky typewriter of a war correspondent—not from the pen of a paid propagandist—but a soul-searing document of facts written by a common soldier!

"ALL QUIET on the WESTERN FRONT" gives you war as it really is—war, stripped of its tinsel and trappings, stripped of its heroics and hokum, stripped of its bunk and its glamor—the sort of war that tight-lipped sons and fathers who were "over there" never dared reveal to you!

"ALL QUIET on the WESTERN FRONT" is the June selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club. Right now—today—it is selling so fast that the publisher's presses can't keep up with the demand. It has swept through Europe like wildfire.

"ALL QUIET on the WESTERN FRONT" will be published in daily instalments in this newspaper starting Monday, August 12th. This is the first time that newspaper readers have been given the opportunity to read a best seller before it has reached its sales peak.

Watch for the first instalment. It's the story that everyone is talking about, and you can't afford to miss it—for, as long as books are written, there never will be another like "ALL QUIET on the WESTERN FRONT."

"I regard any mature reader who has a chance to read this book and does not, and who, having read it, does not pass it on among a dozen others, as a traitor to humanity."

Good Crop Spring Wheat Ripening; Yield, 30 Bushels

Encouraging Report From Peace River is Issued by Provincial Minister of Agriculture

Cutting of wheat will start early next week and will be fairly general a week later in a number of districts in the province, according to telegraphic reports received on Friday by the Department of Agriculture for the sixth crop report of the season. Winter wheat cutting is well under way in the south of the province and a very satisfactory yield is reported.

High Yield

A good crop of spring wheat is also ripening and will yield as high as 30 bushels per acre in some southern districts.

As the result of continued dry weather and hot winds during the past two weeks the prospective yield, particularly throughout the central part of the province, has suffered a further reduction. The wheat crop especially has been affected and much of the grain is so short in the straw that it cannot be harvested satisfactorily by the ordinary methods. The Department of Agriculture, however, is demonstrating at a number of points in this area a binder attachment which will make it possible to save practically all of this short grain, and many farmers are adopting this system with very satisfactory results.

Encouraging reports are received from the Peace River where the crops have been improved by additional rainfall. The oat crop in the north gives promise of a good yield of a quality suitable for seed.

The livestock situation has been affected in some sections of the province and cattle are being disposed of in view of the limited prospect of winter feed. In a few districts it will be necessary to make provision for additional feed to carry breeding stock and work horses over winter, but arrangements can be made to ship this in from other localities where hay and feed have been less seriously reduced.

Cutting of the second crop of alfalfa has started in the south, and a somewhat lighter yield than usual is being put up. Sugar beets are being irrigated regularly and a good crop is promised.

COMPLETE LINE TO GREAT MINE

Last Steel Laid in Branch From Flin Flon to Sherritt-Gordon

The last steel on the branch line from the Manitoba Northern railway to the Sherritt-Gordon mining area was laid today, according to word received by H. A. Dixon, chief engineer of the western region of the Canadian National Railways who is in the west with Sir Henry Thornton.

Providing weather conditions remain favorable, Mr. Dixon is of the opinion the road will be turned over to the Canadian National Railways for operation early this Fall.

This branch line which is about 42 miles long leaves the Manitoba Northern Railway (more popularly known as the Flin Flon Railway) about two miles north-west of Cranberry Portage and runs from there to the Sherritt-Gordon property. Work on it was started last December and has proceeded without interruption. The Dominion Construction Company which built the Flin Flon branch in record time had charge of this work.

The completion of this new branch line so early in the season will allow the mine operators to move their heavy machinery in by rail and get most of it set up during the winter months and thereby be in a good position to proceed with development of their property next spring.

Several cases have been reported in Ontario, according to press reports.

BIG HIGHLAND GATHERING TO START TODAY

Mayor Bury Will Declare Scottish Games Open in Soft Irish Brogue

Stalwart sons of Scotland and lassies fair and bonnie as the Scotch bluebell or heather, will gather at the exhibition grounds on Saturday afternoon to attend the opening session of the great Highland gathering and games which will continue over the week-end and conclude on Monday night with a gala concert, dance and presentation of prizes.

His Worship Mayor A. U. G. Bury at 2:30 p.m., will in his best and most approved manner declare the great gathering officially open. His Worship though a true Son o' Erin, is out to prove he is a true Britisher and that he can speak Gaelic with the same facility as he can his native merry Irish brogue.

Official Party

It is expected that His Honor Lieut. Gov. Dr. William Egbert and party from government house will be in attendance.

For the last two days, incoming trains have been bringing a large number of both contestants and spectators in to the city and Tom H. Campbell, president of the Highland Games Association, which organization is sponsoring the event, has conservatively estimated the probable attendance at more than 6000.

Mr. Campbell and his associates have received the endorsation and support of the Caledonian, Gaelic and St. Andrew's Societies for the holding of the gathering and with such strong support it is certain to turn out a winner.

Good Program

An excellent program has been drawn up for Saturday afternoon. Immediately after the opening ceremony has been performed a series of athletic events and other contests will be staged which will occupy the entire afternoon.

Sunday will be observed by the Scots in the most devout manner. Commencing at 3 p.m. on the green sward of the legislative grounds and to the south of the main building there will be held a religious ceremony under the direction of Capt. Rev. K. C. McLeod, famous Edmonton overseas padre. This service at which will be seen the Highlanders in all their tartan and kilt glory, will also have the lament of the bagpipes to add to the impressiveness of the scene.

A truly Highland religious service is one which for fervor and impressiveness should be attended by all.

Athletic Events

On Monday the athletic and other events will be resumed at the exhibition grounds, with the first events scheduled to commence at 10 a.m.

Competitions will last throughout the day and in the evening the scene will shift to the Canadian Legion Memorial hall where a grand concert, dance and presentation of prizes and trophies will take place.

Mr. Campbell, as president of the Highland Games Association is being assisted by H. Esplin as vice president, J. G. MacEachran as secretary; A. Beaton, treasurer and James McGregor, business manager.

The general committee consists of R. J. Gillis, N. MacLean, K. Murray, J. F. MacDonald, W. Cavin, J. Shirlaw, J. Ferguson, C. MacIntosh, J. Campbell, D. Campbell, J. Sutherland, J. Gray, R. D. Mackenzie, Jack Wilson, James MacKenzie and W. Duncan.

Competitors already have arrived from Winnipeg, Regina, Vancouver, Calgary, Brandon, Bruderheim, Fernie, North Battleford and several other points while many from other points were due to arrive on Saturday morning. More than 200 entries have been received in various events and from all indications the gathering promises to be of the historic variety.

J. Ruryk, Canadian Pacific Railway colonization agent at Saskatoon, is a visitor in Edmonton for a few days. He motored through from the Saskatchewan city in 11 hours, and reports that the roads are in excellent condition.

A. T. Weldon, vice-president in charge of traffic for the Canadian National railways, who spent Friday conferring with traffic officials of the northern lines, left for eastern Canada Friday night.

Walter Thompson, director of publicity for the C.N.R. returned to eastern Canada Friday night.

A. DRISCOLL CHAIRMAN OF TOWN BOARD

Heads Town Planning Commission—Mrs. Wallace Vice Chairman

A. Driscoll was elected chairman of the Edmonton town planning commission at the initial meeting of that body held Friday afternoon to discuss plans of organization and procedure. Mrs. R. C. Wallace, wife of Dr. Wallace, president of the University of Alberta, was elected vice chairman.

Name Committees

Standing committees elected were: Executive, A. Driscoll, Mrs. R. C. Wallace and Mayor A. U. G. Bury; streets and transit, Professor G. B. Burgess and Ald. R. V. Bellamy; transportation, Mayor A. U. G. Bury and George Buchanan; zoning, A. Driscoll, H. Milton Martin and Edward Underwood; public recreation and civic art, Mrs. R. C. Wallace and Ald James East.

J. F. D. Tanqueray, assistant to Horace L. Seymour, provincial town planning director, was appointed honorary secretary, but the question of appointing a permanent technical advisor to the commission was deferred, Ald. Bellamy being loathe to make such an appointment until others had had an opportunity of applying for the post.

Act is Read

At the outset of the meeting Mr. Tanqueray read a portion of the town planning act recently passed by the provincial legislature, governing the constitution of town planning commissions.

Mr. Martin raised the question of funds and said it was a certainty that if the commission was going to have the responsibility of drafting and administering a town plan which would possibly take three years to prepare a large sum of money would have to be voted by council. Mr. Martin placed the sum required at $15,000.

On Mr. Martin's motion the executive committee was instructed to confer with the commissioners on the power of the town planning commission and allocation of funds, prior to the passing of the by-law by council.

Bulls-Eyes

Walter McLean, interdict, found on licensed premises, was fined $20 and costs.

The Beverly Horticultural Society decided at a regular monthly meeting to postpone their annual flower and vegetable show from Wednesday, August 14, to Wednesday, August 28.

Seven Dollars was the highest price bid during the sale of cancelled oil and natural gas leases held in mine recorder's office Friday. The leases were on Townships 44 and 45, Range 5, west of the 4th meridian, in the Wainwright area. All the lands offered were sold.

Visiting Western Canada with the object of writing a series of articles on the country and its development for the Buffalo Evening News, Merwin H. Browne, of the Washington bureau of that paper, accompanied by his wife, spent Friday in Edmonton.

After being in the care of the Canadian Legion for in some cases nine years, the medals mentioned in this paper a few days ago are being claimed. Of the total of 11 originally advertised, five have been already claimed, and it is expected that another one will be today.

Much Good Fishing Available Near City

Fishing in Lac St. Anne is good according to reports received from visitors there, and will remain good over the holiday. Pike and pickerel have been taken in large numbers not far from Wabamun, and although those caught near the weeds have been small, some fish of large size have been taken farther out.

Good fish have been also caught from Alberta Beach, but not in such large numbers although large numbers of anglers have been out. Seba Beach has not a very good shore for fishing, but though not usually recommended certain anglers have done well, fishing a mile or two north.

Reports from Edson state that the water round there is in fair condition and that some trout have been caught but no large catches have been reported for some time.

40 Bushels An Acre Through Barrhead Area

Testimony continues to flow into the city to the effect that crops in Northern Alberta are better than has been generally forecast. The latest evidence comes from H. Runball of Barrhead who states, in a letter to John Blue, secretary of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce that Marquis wheat and banner oats are standing 4½ feet high throughout the district and that binders will be clicking by August 15.

This condition, states Mr. Runball, is not exceptional and has been looked for all the summer. The wheat yield he estimates will average 40 bushels to the acre throughout the district.

McLeod in police court Saturday morning. Calreg was discharged on a charge of carnal knowledge. The charges arose from Calreg's behavior towards a 13-year-old girl during the fair week. In sentencing the accused Magistrate McLeod said he felt sorry for him, as he had been favorably impressed with his appearance and conduct in court.

During the 12 hours prior to eight a.m. rain fell at Camrose, Clive, Hanna, Brooks, Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, Tabor, Bow Island and Blairmore.

REAL ESTATE ASSOCIATION PROGRESSING

Improves Relations of Public and Agents—Acts as Check

In operation three years, the Edmonton Real Estate association has done much to improve existing conditions between the agents and general public, the organization being composed of reputable realtors on whom the public may rely with confidence.

Many difficulties facing the profession have been overcome by the association, one of the most important being that of commissions. The organization set to work to have this matter settled to the satisfaction of all with the result that all charges are now standardized on a fair and equitable basis.

Get Legislation

During recent months the association went to work on the question of licensing or bonding the agents. This meant legislation and the members went before the provincial house requesting such a measure be passed. A favorable hearing was given and a bill introduced, becoming effective July 1 of this year.

As a result of this all real estate salesmen and agents must be licensed and those selling or dealing in real estate without such license are liable to prosecution. In the event of any investor or customer having any complaint to make, this can be done by placing the matter before the superintendent of insurance, issuer of the licenses, who will investigate the matter fully.

The members of the association are men of wide experience in their chosen profession. All applicants for membership are closely scrutinized and must be approved as men capable of handling the business before being admitted.

Business meetings of the association are held regularly at which matters in connection with real estate, municipal or provincial, are discussed, the motto of the association being for the development of the community and for the promotion and maintenance of the highest standard of conduct in the transaction of the business.

Officers of the association are as follows: J. J. Duggan, president; R. F. Blackner, vice-president; J. Yule, secretary-treasurer, directors, S Lawrie, J. Bagley, F. J. Lorimer, A. Tylor, B. B. Ferris and P. Barrager.

W. A. Kingsland, general manager central region C.N.R. passed through Edmonton Saturday morning en route to Winnipeg.

G. P. Ponton, 12601 107th avenue, reported to police that his Ford coupe had been stolen some time during Friday night. It has not yet been recovered.

U.S. STUDENTS MAKE TRIP TO PEACE RIVER

Will Write Thesis for Degrees on Land Settlement

Thirteen educationalists, studying for their doctor's degrees at the University of Chicago, headed by Professor C. C. Colby, professor of geography at that institution, arrived in Edmonton Friday night en route to the Peace River country where they will remain until August 24 studying conditions of settlement thus forming the basis of the thesis to be written.

Dr. Colby, who concerns himself with Canada alone, stated that the purpose of the visit was thoroughly to cover the ground. In previous years other parts of the dominion had been covered and this summer the Peace River district, as the last big area now undergoing settlement, was thought to afford a fruitful field.

The professor stated that for the last decade he had been anxious to go into the north and see the unfolding of the drama of settlement.

Final Studies

The party is composed of advanced graduate students of the university to whom this field course will be the last work. The subject of the thesis to be written will be the problems of settlement, each one of the students probably taking some different phase of it. The field course follows a seminar given at the university.

In connection with their study of the north, an intensive survey will be made of Edmonton as a commercial centre, transportation and distributing matters being taken up and the various interests visited, if possible.

The students will also endeavor to determine the farthest north limit of settlement.

With the party is Professor Henry Leppard of Professor Colby's department who will make a special study of pioneer problems in the north, working on a grant from the Salisbury foundation.

It only took the firemen fifteen minutes from the time alarm was turned in till the fire was declared all out, when they answered an alarm from 127th avenue and 118th street at 2:25 this morning. A false alarm was turned in at 10:30 last night, but outside of these two calls the fire department spent a quiet restful day yesterday.

Barney Fisher, old times from Fort Good Hope, is paying his second visit to this city in 23 years. He is at the Leland hotel.

JOTS FROM THE ARTS

ANTHONY VAN DYCK, one of the most famous painters of the Flemish school, is regarded in the front rank of portrait artists of the world. He was a student of Rubens, and studied in the various art centers of Europe. He was not widely known, however, until he became court painter to Charles I of England. Charles knighted Van Dyck, and during his stay at court he painted over 300 pictures of famous folk of that time. When Van Dyck died in 1641, he was buried with the highest honors of his adopted country in St. Paul's Cathedral. He is regarded as one of the greatest colorists of the realm of art, and his work shows the delicate refinement of the artist's own nature. R

WESTERN EXCHANGE Limited

Furniture of the best or medium qualities to suit every phase of home life. We sell, we exchange. We buy right-out for cash. We find you credit if you are short of funds. All we ask is that you meet your obligations. If you do that, well, we don't trouble you very much. See our stock, compare our prices, before you spend your money anywhere. Here is our store 10121 98 Street, directly opposite the police or the No. 1 Fire Hall—just a few yards from the street car line. Our phone is 1332. You may be worse employed than in the experiment. We have some wonderful bargains to offer you. Why we have a splendid full size Dining Suite that cost a little while ago $125 here it is for $59.50. You may buy a complete Bed Outfit that but a few months ago was quoted at $35—now it is on the market for $25.75; and the $22.50 Outfit is quoted at $19.50. Surely that's meeting your wants.

Today, Saturday, is a Tag Day, authorized by Mayor Bury for the relief of suffering Wainwright. Whoever blundered in publishing that Wainwright was not in need of help? Wainwright is in need of help—speedy help. I saw a splendid collection of new blankets and other necessities the mayor had collected at the earnest request of Wainwright, yesterday, which he is dispatching as quickly as the wholesale house can supply them. This Tag Day, under the supervision of Adjutant Stewart, is expected to be a big ingathering of Edmonton's good-will. Many excellent men and women have volunteered their services for the entire day. The Committee's headquarters are in the premises of the old Standard Bank, opposite the Post Office. Please do your best in money and kind. The most careful supervision is being exercised, and the distribution of funds and material will not betray the generous impulse of your noble assistance to the sufferers of that distracted town, many of whom lost everything, especially the tenement class who once lived in the area most disastrously hurt by the conflagration. WATER SUPPLY NOW UP TO THE IDEAL

Stop that ceaseless struggle trying to obtain a good, standard and constant water supply. Do as follows:

Dig a hole in the ordinary way 3 feet in diameter and 5 to 10 feet below water level. Place therein a J. A. Jacobs Patent Quick Sand Filter [illegible]. The filter around must be at least 1 to 2 feet entirely under water. Immediately around the filter [illegible] sand must be placed at least 1 foot above water level. A cement, iron or wood piping must be [illegible] on filter and extended to the surface, and the rest of the hole filled to the top with the excavated earth.

To obtain the water, slide your pump inside piping and let same rest on bottom of filter. You will pump crystal-clear, healthier and more water and it will keep good several generations.

Absolutely no cribbing in this. Any person can install them.

Over a hundred already have been tested for over three years. Never requires repairs or cleaning.

Installation in big quicksand formations require special skill. It is a [illegible] undertaking unless sand is placed [illegible] around filter and up to 1 foot above water level or if cribbing is used. Filters are 4 and 8 feet long by 25" and offered prepaid for first one hundred going out for $20 and $40.

When ordering write address and shipping station distinctly.

HOUSEWIVES!
HERE'S A SIMPLE WAY

To Make Easy Money

"A Dollar Saved is a Dollar Earned"

A few minutes spent in your spare time in making a complete survey of your home from attic to basement may reveal several articles that you no longer need or use.

For instance, an old Gramophone, Organ, Sewing or Washing Machine, Carpet, Bed or Bureau. They originally cost you a fair sum and can still demand a good price even yet.

Many people (who read these ads daily from mere habit) are looking for just the article or articles you have for sale and are willing to pay a substantial price for them.

Why not take advantage of this fact? Simply gather the odds and ends together, make your price within reason, then phone 9324 and ask for the "Classified Dept." The cost is small, but remember

"THE MORE YOU TELL, THE QUICKER YOU SELL."

The SHINING TALENT

By ELEANOR EARLY © 1929 NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

MOLLY BURNHAM and JACK WELLS seem fated to quarrel. Molly is a reporter, and headed for a career. Jack is a draftsman in an architect's office, and getting nowhere at all.

They quarrel when Molly goes to New York and reads Jack the synopsis of a play, to be called "The Death of Delphine Darrows." It is a play founded on the actual facts of the mysterious death of a woman named BERNICE BRADFORD. A man named Barrows was tried for the Bradford woman's death, and Molly covered the trial. Barrows was acquitted. And later, RED FLYNN, a police court reporter, discovered some sensational facts which he and Molly decide to use for the plot for a crime play.

Molly is very happy and excited, and confidently expects to be a successful playwright. But Jack is jealous and old-fashioned. He protests that he does not like to have her write filth and muck. Molly has changed a great deal, he reflects, during the few months that have elapsed since her graduation from college. Her dearest friends, in college days, were RITA MELNOTTE and RUTH WOODS, both of whom were secretly married before commencement. Bob infinitely preferred the old friendships to Molly's new ones.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIV

The week-end in New York constituted two days of wretchedness. Molly had expected praise and encouragement from Jack. And she received instead disparagement and censure. He disapproved strongly of her work. He was jealously resentful of Red Flynn, and hated, he admitted, the ways of all newspaper men.

"Why don't you write something worth while, Molly?" he pleaded.

"What would you suggest?" she had inquired, frigidly polite.

But Jack was vague. "Oh, something nice," he floundered. "You used to write sweet little verses. And I bet you could write pretty stories for children. Then there are all the high class magazines. My gosh, Molly, you don't have to write for such a screaming newspaper."

"But I want to earn money, Jack," she had defended herself. "Poetry doesn't pay anything. Besides, I'm no poet. As for children's magazines . . ."

She fluttered her white little white hands despairingly. "I tell you, dear, a steady job on a newspaper is best. It assures an income, you see, and doesn't prohibit me from taking a fling at your high class magazines. Or even trying my hand at a play."

Jack groaned. "That play again! Of all the sordid, rotten themes, you picked the darndest. If you want to write a play, why don't you write about something decent?"

"It doesn't pay," she informed him tartly.

"How about Peter Pan?"

"But that was ages ago, dear. Eugene O'Neill doesn't write fairy tales, nor Charlie McArthur and Ben Hecht. Take the outstanding successes. Crime plays, or sex plays, all of them."

"So that's what you want to do?" he demanded disagreeably. "Write crime and sex?"

"I want to make money," she told him wearily, "to buy all the lovely things I dream about, and go all the lovely places I've read about.

"But it isn't only money that I want. I want to be somebody. Not just little Molly Burnham who married that nice young man, Jack Wells . . . ."

"Don't let me cramp your style," he interjected bitterly.

And so they quarreled and bickered, and Jack never guessed that, womanlike, Molly would have forsworn all her dreams of wealth and fame for a man who could dominate her. So he criticized and found fault, and adopted quite the wrong tactics, until Molly was glad when it was time to leave.

"It hasn't been a very nice week-end," she confessed penitently at parting, "and I feel as though it was pretty much my fault. I guess I'm awfully selfish. I love you with all my heart, Jack. But getting married, to cook pot roasts and darn socks, and budget on $45 a week, doesn't sound half so romantic as it used to. I've had my taste of independence, and found it sweet. Do you hate me, darling, for being modern and hard-boiled, and all the horrid things you abominate?"

"Hate you!" he cried. "Oh, Molly dear, if I were only good enough for you, and clever, and rich!"

She put her fingers to his lips.

"Sh! Honey, we're both going to knock 'em dead!"

In the morning Molly went directly from the train to the courthouse. As she approached the building she was conscious of a curious atmosphere of suppressed excitement. Plainclothes men lounged on the courthouse steps, while others, in uniform, kept curious pedestrians moving. In the corridor she met Slim Boynton.

"There's hell to pay," he told her grimly. "And if you don't get jailed for contempt of court, you're luckier than you deserve. One of the jurymen got hold of a story you wrote. Of course, they're not supposed to look at the newspapers, but this bird did. And now he admits that he's all set to find Mandinello guilty. Attorneys for the defence have petitioned for a mistrial, and the judge is considering the evidence now. You'll probably be called to his chambers any minute. It's Wharton's fault. And now the whole outfit's liable to go to jail."

"Slim! You don't mean it."

Molly experienced a dreadful sinking feeling, and her knees became suddenly weak.

"Sure I mean it. What do you think I am, a practical little joker? Ask any of the boys. Look in the courtroom there. It's empty, isn't it? Wharton's been phoning all morning. Wants you to call him. They may take a chance, and send you up to Canada, until the thing blows over."

Molly was genuinely frightened. She had visions of going to jail, and wearing a striped dress like a woman she had interviewed in the house of correction.

A court officer approached her kindly.

"Judge Brewster wishes to see you, Miss Burnham."

"Oh, my lord, Slim! What will I do?"

"Well, you can't very well run," observed Slim. "Go ahead and take your medicine."

Judge Brewster, formidable in his black robes, received her gently, explaining the situation with legal preciseness. He would be obliged, he said, to declare a mistrial. The fault was not so much hers, as the juryman's. He had warned the jury not to read the papers. There had been, it would appear, a serious misdemeanor. A friend of the accused man had sent a newspaper containing a story of Molly's to this particular juryman. Certain passages of the story had been penciled.

"An unprejudiced person reading that article would undoubtedly be influenced against the defendant," declared the judge. "As a newspaper woman you have no right to be anything but impartial in what you write. It is a serious offense, and frequently merits a fine, or a jail sentence. In view, however, of the evident conspiracy among Mandinello's friends, I am inclined to deal leniently with your own offense.

"Whoever it was who sent the paper containing your story to Juryman Flagler, communicated the fact to attorneys for the defense. They promptly demanded an investigation, and I have questioned Mr. Flagler. He admits having read the article, and declares that he is now predisposed to find the defendant guilty. In view of his sworn statement, I must call a mistrial."

The judge stopped speaking, and Molly raised her flushed face to meet his judicial gaze, fixed sternly upon her.

"I'm fearfully sorry," she stammered. "There isn't anything I can say. I've no defense, no excuse."

He regarded her more kindly. "Allow me to commend your chivalry, Miss Burnham. It transcends your indiscretion. It is uncommonly gallant when a person brought to [illegible]

Molly shook her head. "I write my own stories," she insisted. "Mr. Wharton is not responsible."

Judge Brewster rose, and his black robes billowed solemnly about him.

"That is all," he said. "Except that I should advise you, Miss Burnham, for your own good, to be more careful in the future. Gunmen execute fearful reprisals."

Slim was waiting when Molly left the judge's chambers.

"It's all right," she said. "I'm not going to jail."

But Slim was in a dark mood.

"Maybe you'll get shot," he hazarded. "Maybe you'd be better off in jail. They couldn't get at you if you were behind the bars."

"Oh, Slim, stop! You make my blood run cold. Have you phoned the office? Judge Brewster is declaring a mistrial."

"Sure. I gave them that 10 minutes ago. Wharton's up in the air. The publisher has been giving him the devil, I guess. And he says for you to keep out of the office until he sends for you. Wants the thing to blow over before you show up, I guess. Talk about getting all the breaks! You pull a gag you ought to get sent to jail for, and what do you rate? A vacation!"

Molly laughed light-heartedly. The dreadful cloud had lifted. The dark fear was all dispelled. She felt happy and gay.

"I'll have a little dinner party tonight," she thought. "Not any of the crowd from the office. I'll ask Rita and Bob, and Ruth and Zip. It will be like old times to be with them again."

She telephoned from the courthouse, and reached Rita at Miss Mayhew's. Rita said that she and Bob would love to go. They had talked of dropping in that evening anyhow, it was such ages since they had seen Molly.

But Ruth said she didn't feel well. Besides, Zip was busy at the office, and sometimes he didn't get home until pretty late. It made things wretched, because they couldn't very well accept dinner invitations. Not that it made any difference, Ruth added. She didn't feel like going out, anyhow. She couldn't imagine what had come over her lately. Zip said she was like an old woman.

"You sound so unhappy, dear!" lamented Molly.

"Maybe you'd sound unhappy," replied Ruth reproachfully, "if you'd lost your little baby." . . . and Molly heard her sob before she hung up the receiver.

She felt as thought she had been tactless and unsympathetic, and later that day she sent Ruth some flowers.

It was a very successful small dinner. Molly's china was mostly Italian, and so she planned an Italian meal.

They were sitting over their coffee when the bell rang. The finger that pressed the button held it maddeningly.

They were sitting over their coffee when the bell rang. The finger that was ringing it pressed on the button, and held it maddeningly. Molly released the door, but the bell continued to ring. She called through the speaking tube. But still the bell rang with unceasing insistence.

"Something's up. I'll see who it is," offered Bob.

He was gone for several minutes, and hearing strange noises in the hall, the girls went to investigate. Bob was propelling a man up the stairs — a man who waved his arms about and was making dreadful sounds.

"It's Zip!" cried Rita.

"Zip? But Zip doesn't drink," Molly ran down to the landing. "What's the matter with Zip?" she demanded.

Bob was trying to quiet him. "Here Zip, that's no way to act. Get yourself in hand, can't you, old man?"

"Is he drunk, Bob?"

Bob shook his head. Then Zip recognized Molly. He flung himself away from Bob, and threw his arms about her. He was crying like a child.

Edmonton Prepares For Her Own Holiday

CITY DAY IS CELEBRATED MONDAY NEXT

Golf Finals, Highland Games, to be Chief Attractions

Edmonton's own holiday, Civic Day, will be celebrated Monday and unless the patron god of rain, familiarly known as Jupe Pluvius, decides to take a prominent part in the festivities, the great majority of Edmonton citizens plan to make a week-end of it.

Stores Closed

Practically all stores, offices, shops and other places of business will observe the holiday and for most the holiday will start Saturday afternoon. Roads to nearby pleasure resorts are in good condition and large numbers are expected to journey by motor to nearby pleasure resorts. In addition special trains will be operated to Edmonton Beach, Kapasiwin, Wabamun, Fallis, Seba Beach, Lac St. Anne and Alberta Beach by the Canadian National Railways. The usual holiday crowd to Banff is anticipated by Canadian Pacific Railway officials.

For Scotchmen and all other lovers of sport, all roads will lead to the Exhibition grounds where the annual Highland games will open at 2.30 p.m. Saturday. The festivities, including sporting and dancing competitions, will be held both Saturday and Monday.

Golf Finals

The finals in the city golf championship will take place at Mayfair Golf and Country Club and a good gallery is expected to follow the play. In addition, golfers will be out in force at other links.

Special competitions will take place at the majority of city tennis courts. All city swimming pools will draw their share of natators.

At the Boyle street grounds Monday at 6:45 p.m. the Chevrolet Cubs and South Side baseball teams will meet in a diamond fixture. A good soccer game is promised on Saturday at seven p.m., when the Callies and C.N.R. will tangle.

Yacht races will be held Sunday at South Cooking Lake and keen competition is anticipated.

In fact, with Civic Day coming at the height of the summer season, there is no lack of various entertainments and a real holiday will be enjoyed.

SCOUTS END FIRST WEEK OF JAMBOREE

Pageant of Sea Scouts Today's Feature—Thanksgiving Service Sunday

Canadian Press Cable

ARROWE PARK, Eng., Aug. 3—The first week of the biggest international gathering of boys in history, drew to a close today with 50,000 Boy Scouts able truthfully to say good times had been had in Arrowe Park.

In a few short days the boys have been witnesses and victims of an astounding variety of weather, including a storm that tried to wash and blow their tents down and a drizzle that attempted to drown their boyish enthusiasm.

Much more remains to the Scouts before August 13, when the jamboree ends and the boys scatter to the world's four corners, carrying with them first-hand knowledge of what international brotherhood means in practical operations.

The feature of today's program of the jamboree is the pageant of the Sea Scouts. The great thanksgiving service comes tomorrow. Numerous incidents of the Prince's visit yesterday were told over and over again today by the boys.

The Prince at one time was greeted by a party of deaf and dumb youths who waved their hats on sticks and made him understand how deep was their regard for him. The blind scouts also pressed forward in another crowd.

Sir Robert Baden Powell telegraphed the King conveying the deep gratitude of the 50,000 Scouts for the King's message of yesterday. The message, the Scout chief said, will be an immense inspiration and encouragement to all ranks.

"I also offer my humble thanks for Your Majesty's all-too generous acceptance of myself as the figurehead of the movement," the message said.

Prairie Wheat Ripening Early

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Aug. 3.—The dry hot weather is causing crops on the prairies to ripen early. Considerable barley has already been cut in Manitoba and some fields of Reward wheat. The crop report issued at noon today the Dominion bureau of statistics shows that all the prairie provinces were suffering from lack of rain. Morden, Man., reported "all crops thin, yields will average below 50 per cent."

Alberta reports a good winter wheat crop and winter rye a fair crop. Wheat harvesting will start next week in southern Alberta and will be general in about two weeks. Harvesting will be general in Saskatchewan by August 12. The best crops in Saskatchewan are found in the north, but there, also, rain is neded in many places.

Conditions are good in Prince Edward Island. Nova Scotia has suffered from the drought as has also New Brunswick. Good hay crops are reported from both Ontario and Quebec. In Ontario the fall wheat threshing has commenced and the yield is above the average.

Traveller Fails In Attempt At Suicide

Canadian Press

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 3.—J. H. Breadner, 46, described as a commercial traveller, Winnipeg, attempted to commit suicide by slashing his wrist with a razor blade in a local hotel here Friday night. He was rushed to the General hospital where five stitches were put in his wrist. He is not considered to be in danger.

One of the guests in the adjoining room to that occupied by Breadner heard groans and summoned the proprietor, who found the man lying in a pool of blood. It was said he has not been in good health for some months.

London Bus Centenary Fittingly Observed

The procession of buses dating from the old time horse bus to the motor vehicle passing along Whitehall in connection with the Bus Centenary. JUDGE DUBUC BACK IN CITY FROM AKLAVIK

Says Extensive Developments Are Proceeding in Northland

Extensive developments are proceeding in the far north and foundations are being laid for what is expected to be vast mineral production, according to His Honor Judge Lucien Dubuc, who has returned from Aklavik, where he went to sit as trial judge in the trial for murder of two Eskimos.

Made Fast Trip

The acused were Eskimos Okchino and Eskimo Lily Sarnyuk, both of whom were found guilty by a jury and both of whom were given sentence of one year's imprisonment, suspended in the case of the woman.

Judge Dubuc spoke glowingly of the speed of the S.S. Distributor on its run to Aklavik and return. This trip constituted a record and was primarily the result of new transportation arrangements.

A new steamer, the Mackenzie, carried the heavy freight down the Mackenzie river to Fort Good Hope, leaving Fort Smith 12 days ahead of the Distributor. The Distributor carried express goods and passengers, and picked up, at Fort St. John, the freight from the last three points, Fort Good Hope, Arctic Red River and Aklavik. Thus the Distributor only had to stop half an hour at each post instead of the 12 hours customary in former years.

Since the Hudson's Bay company purchased the S.S. Northland Echo, the service on the Athabasca has been increased to two trips a week down to Fort Smith.

Wonderful development is taking place in the matter of exploration, said His Honor.

Fleet Of Planes

The Dominion Explorers have put in a large fleet of airplanes and these are sent out in various directions each week with an old time prospector and a pilot in each plane. Beneath each plane is a canoe, so that if a landing is made, further work can be carried out by the prospector in this. A week after each plane goes out another travels over the same route to determine if the first plane reached its destination. Each month the prospectors return to the base at Fort McPherson to report and for further instructions. By this means His Honor thought a vast amount of valuable information was being gathered.

Fills in Gap

This means of exploration also was filling in the gap in the great mineral countries, between the gold of the Yukon, the Flin Flon, Porcupine and Cobalt areas.

Extensive wireless installations were being made in the north and one route was being arranged connecting Aklavik, Baker Lake and Chesterfield Inlet.

The Explorers' Company is carrying out a five year program of development.

His Honor found that the Indians were enjoying finer health than ever before. Trade was good, and though the trappers thought fur was scarcer than usual, the prices were good.

Judge Dubuc said he and his party found travelling conditions excellent and that the trials at Aklavik had proceeded according to schedule and without any undue occurrences.

Gas Company Ends Lowering Of Pipe

Working through the nights so as not to disturb the gas pressure during the daylight hours, the Northwestern Utilities Ltd. has successfully completed the lowering of the main pipe lines into the city from the Viking gas fields.

Road operations of the provincial government this summer uncovered the main at five different places along the North Cooking Lake trail. The last of these sections, about 200 feet long, was successfully lowered five feet on Friday night. The total cost of the work was over $2000, and it was carried out without any disturbance to the gas company's customers.

PORT ALBERNI, B.C., Aug. 3.—On the final lap of his speaking tour on Vancouver Island, Hon. R. B. Bennett, left here this morning for Courtenay. Opening at Bowcher's Beach on Wednesday the Conservative leader has [illegible] five meetings [illegible] from Vancouver [illegible] night.

Historic Fraser Pipes Not To Be Played At Games

The historic Fraser pipes will not be played at the Highland Gathering this year, to the grief of all true Scots. Owing to a letter inviting Colin Fraser to bring them going astray and not arriving until after he had left, they still repose at Fort Chipewyan.

These pipes were first brought to this country by Simon Fraser, in about 1830, who was given them by his father, and are over 200 years old. Simon Fraser, father of Colin Fraser, was piper to Sir George Simpson, governor of the Hudson Bay Company, and accompanied him on his trips to the company's posts.

The pipes, which are still in perfect condition, are now only played on special occasions, the tartan covering, of two shades of red and white, being in somewhat tender condition and liable to tear on account of its great age. It is expected that they will be ultimately placed in the safe keeping of the country as an heirloom of the people.

Ontario Provincial Election Oct. 28?

Canadian Press

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 3. — The Evening Telegram says it learns from an undisputed authority that "The Ferguson government will go to the electors of Ontario on Monday, October 28."

"It has been the feeling in political circles that Premier G. H. Ferguson would decide on an election this year," says the paper. "At all times these rumors have been denied at the Ontario parliament buildings, but it is understood," continues the Telegram, "that on pressure from a member of his cabinet the premier actually promised to make the official announcement very soon."

"I have not been consulted about the matter, nor any one else, for that matter," said Premier G. H. Ferguson, when queried regarding the report.

Engineer Haddow Prepares Report for Finance Committee

Important matters are scheduled for consideration by the finance committee meeting Tuesday afternoon.

City Engineer Haddow will report to the committee the immediate necessity of replacement of the bridge at 102 avenue and 135 street. Award of the contract for the printing of the city telephone directory for the next three years will also be taken into consideration while ownership coal mining rights under lanes and streets within the city limits will be a subject for discussion.

One of the most contentious matters to come before the committee will be the request of heads of various civic departments for a general increase in salaries.

Big Scots Day At Nth. Cooking Lake

Although haggis did not figure on the bill of fare, the Scotch cookies and shortbread provided by Jock McNeill when his summer cottage at North Cooking Lake was invaded by a number of leading Kiwanians on Friday evening were ample to make the party one of general discussion amongst the fortunate to make the trip. Shortbread and scones formed a large part of the fare supplied, but it is understood from those present, that there were other refreshments also.

A golf tournament on the nine hole course constructed by Mr. McNeill was run off, but darkness did not permit the games being played to a finish.

The ancient and noble game of quoits also had a big following during the evening, with J. W. Glenwright winning the championship.

Thinking With the Eye

This is an eye minded age: of all our senses the impressions that are received through the eye are the most vivid and are the longest retained in the memory. The A.B.C., with which we all begin our eye-to-mind training, is the key to that vast store of printed knowledge into which we dip like bees that pass from flower to flower. Custom has necessarily made the printed message the most effective medium for the exchange of ideas because it is received through the most receptive channel to the mind—the eye. Moreover, printed matter can always be kept for future reference and study.

Naturally, eye mindedness makes us all very susceptible to likes and dislikes in the appearances of things. If the first look of printed matter offends or does not attract, we are apt to pass it by without troubling to read its message. On the other hand, some printing simply compels the eye to linger, and it would often be hard to say where the printer had left off and the artist began... But, this, of course, depends upon your choice of a printer.

STUDEBAKER CONTINUES TO MAKE RECORDS

Two Studebaker President Eights one of which won first place in its class, were the only American cars to take honors in the famous British "Double-Twelve" endurance run held recently on the Brooklands speedway near London, according to cables received by the Studebaker Corporation.

The two President Eights were competing against a field of fifty-one cars, most of which wre of British or European make. Both the Studebakers finished with flying colors, the leading car averaging 71.65 miles an hour for the twenty-four hour tset run in two heats of twelve hours each. The severity of the event, which is considered the most gruelling test of cars on the English racing schedule is indicated by the fact that anly 26 of the 52 cars entered were running a the finish.

The Presidents were stock chassis with English built bodies. Cars were grouped in classes by their engine capacity, and were forced to carry ballast according to these ratings. The endurance run was held in two sections of twelve hours each in order to avoid night driving. During the interval between the first and second heats the cars were placed under lock and key by the officials in order to prevent repairs or adjustments.

The average of 71.65 miles an hour which won first place in Class B for the President Eight compares favorably with the record-breaking achievement of another stock President Eight which averaged 85.28 miles per hour for 24 continuous hours on the Atlantic speedway last November. The Atlantic City track is steeply banked and permits a sustained high speed impossible to maintain on the flatter English track.

Eureka! Parking Is Solved

APPLETON, Wis., Aug. 3—The business men of this city who drive to their offices and park in front of their business places, have put one over on the city authorities who limit parking in the office district to 90 minutes.

The business men have thought of a novel scheme. They set alarm clocks in their cars to ring at the end of 90 minutes. Then the startling sound of the clock interrupts the calm routine, a mad rush is made for the curb. Into their cars the big butter and egg men hop, drive them around the block and park them in the space next to the one they had used before.

And calm again reigns for another 90 minutes.

BLUE MOST POPULAR OF AUTO COLORS

WILMINGTON, Del., July 27.—This time a year ago green was the favored color in automobile bodies, followed in order by blue and gray.

According to E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., the order is now completely reversed, blue being the favorite, with brown second and green and gray dropping out of the picture.

The index a year ago, according to proportionate sales set blue at 119, green at 324 and gray at 104. This year's index places blue at 308, brown at 110, green at 69 and gray at 82. Brown, officials say, at the present rate of increased popularity, will outstrip blue before the summer season is over.

Hudson - Essex Sales Continue Show Gains

DETROIT, Mich., July 27.—Hudson Motor Car Company completed in the six months period ended June 30 the largest half year in its history, with 226,318 Hudson and Essex cars produced and shipped. June figures were 31,737. In the six months period of 1928 shipments were 183,047, the 1929 figures thus showing a 24.2 per cent gain. Every individual month of the six was a record-breaker, it is announced.

While the peak of sales activity undoubtedly passed with the spring months, sales and business reports to Hudson officials are of active and prosperous conditions, it is stated. Stocks of cars with distributors and dealers are reported as well below the normal supply of a month's sales.

The Philippine Islands, one of the smallest possessions of the United States, has a motor vehicle registration of more than 28,425.

TEXAS TOWN VALUES WORTH OF AIRPORT

SNYDER, Tex., Aug. 3.—The tourist trade is booming and the aviation industry is doing likewise in this town of 5000. It has made arrangements for both on a scale that rivals cities with twenty times the population.

D. P. Yoder, an engineer, hit upon a combination idea of attracting tourists and airplanes at the same time. The result is a fine airport and a series of modern "Cabin Inns" for tourists.

The port is situated in a spot to attract tourists. It has a landing area of 3000 acres, approachable from all directions.

One hanger completed will house six planes. The field sports an electric refueling pump, an administration office, plane supply room and machine shop.

As part of the field equipment, a monoplane is used for commercial work, flying school and cross-country hops indulged in by tourists. A government licensed pilot is in charge. Air markers have been installed in the center of the field and can be seen for 15 miles. A wind indicator and other weather instruments are also part of the equipment.

After the airport attracts the tourists, the "Cabin Inns," and surrounding conveniences keep them there. The inns are individual units, each as modern as a hotel. They are constructed of stucco, the color scheme being green and white. They are fitted with shower baths, telephones, telegraph facilities, gas, water, electricity, with radio hookup and other modern conveniences.

Restaurants, groceries and sundries are found in buildings making up part of the group plan. The Santa Fe railway depot is nearby.

Additional lures for tourists are offered by the Snyder Golf and Country Club and a swimming pool.

TRAFFIC ADVICE

When you are surprised by a driver cutting directly out from the curb in front of you and making a left turn, don't try to swerve past on his left. The best way to avoid a serious accident, according to the Automobile club of Southern California, is to swing into the opening between the curb and the rear of his car.

To suit your needs we carry a line of over-size, standard or special pins that will enable you to have all the slap removed.

WILLYS HEAD SAYS NO CHANGE IN ITS POLICIES

New President Makes Announcement to Press

Along with reports that the Willys-Overland company, Toledo, Ohio, has been sold to outside interests, comes authentic information that Linwood A. Miller, first vice-president of the company for the past four years, has been elected president to succeed John N. Willys. Miller has held an executive position with the organization for the past 15 years. Willys continues with the company as chairman of the board of directors.

That there will be no change in the personnel or policies of the Willys-Overland organization was indicated in a statement by Mr. Miller a few days ago.

"The development that makes Mr. John N. Willys, chairman of the board and gives Willys-Overland a new president, does not mean any change in the personnel or policies of our organization.

"For the last two years, Mr. Willys has felt the need of curtailing his personal activities. He has been a tireless worker, both at Toledo and when traveling in the interests of the company. He has undoubtedly visited more domestic and export distributors and dealers than any president in the automobile industry.

"In spite of this desire for release from some of his responsibilities, Mr. Willys deferred selling his stock until he felt that he had developed an organization that could carry out his policies. We shall continue to have the advice and counsel of Mr. Willys. In fact, he has just played an active part in mapping out our production program for the next eighteen months.

"Our board of directors is greatly strengthened by the financial experience and business acumen of Marshall Field and Charles F. Glore, selected as members at the July 16th meeting. The other members of our board have served for many years. Most of them are manufacturers whose practical experience is most valuable in the formulation of our plans.

"Over the last five years we have steadily been turning back profits into our plant, so as to have it in the best condition for an expanding volume of business. We have also established our assembly plant at Los Angeles. Our subsidiary plants at Pontiac, Elmira and Elyria were never in such excellent shape. We have on our books more distributors, dealers and authorized service stations than ever before in our history. Moreover our product has been so well received by the public that 1928 established a new record of 314,000 cars sold.

"We all recognize the importance of maintaining a satisfied and prosperous distributor and dealer organization. The same policies that made Mr. Willys so popular with all our retailing organization will be continued.

"The future of our company, in the judgment of us all, can best be served by carrying out the policies of its founder, and this will be the goal of our efforts."

HEAVY BURDEN

Motor vehicle taxes in 1928 drew a revenue of nearly $808,000,000. Of this amount the Federal excise tax (repealed on May 29, 1928) accounted for more than $20,300,000. State registration fees and gasoline tax supplied more than $627,800,000; municipal tax, $20,000,000, and personal property tax $140,000,000.

Edmontonian Invents New Signal Device

Letters patent have just been granted to an old resident of Edmonton covering an invention of his, which appears to be just about the last word in automatic traffic signalling devices.

The inventor, Mr. Thomas Naylor of 82nd avenue, has exercised great ingenuity in the construction of the working parts of this newest aid to safety first and the device should meet with real popularity, not only from motorists, but also from teamsters and others using horse drawn vehicles in the city, especially.

The device consists of an arm which is operated from inside the car or wagon and when a left turn is contemplated the devide displays a red glass disc or a red light at the left side of the vehicle, thus taking the place of the drivers hand, which can be clearly seen by the oncoming traffic from the rear. The illumination of the device can be easily handled by the ordinary ignition system or a couple of dry cells. The device is very simple in construction and has been generally approved by traffic officers.

CAN'T MOVE TRAINS

According to a railroad engineer, 25 per cent. of the grade crossing accidents in 1928 were caused by automobiles running into trains.

Sammy Mandell Successfully Defends His Lightweight Boxing Crown

OUTPOINTS TONY CANZONERI IN FAST TEN ROUND BATTLE

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY
(A. P. Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, Ills., August 3 — A courageous young man named Tony Canzoneri, once ruler of the world's featherweight boxers, attempted to annex the lightweight championship from Sammy Mandell in the Chicago Stadium last night and for ten rounds received the boxing lesson of his life.

Mandell, off to a bad start, when he dropped the first two rounds to the chesty, flat-nozed Canzoneri, opened up in the middle of the third round and from then on, hit Tony with everything he could think of. Meanwhile,. Canzoneri, attempting to bounce a knockout punch off the champion's chin, continually charged in close, but got nowhere. The great left hand of a great boxer turned back the ambitions of the New York boy. Mandell splashed lefts in Tony's face and thundered rights to the body.

DECISION WAS NOT UNANIMOUS

The decision of the two judges and referee Dave Barry, was not unanimous, however. Barry, whose "fourteen second" count in the Dempsey-Tunney heavyweight championship battle created such a furor, cast his ballot in favor of Canzoneri with the judges voting for the champion. The judges credited Mandell with winning seven of the ten rounds with two going to Canzoneri, and one, the eighth even.

The battle drew a crowd estimated at 24,500 with gross gate receipts at $165,000.

Fail to Reach Decision in Postponed Senior Ball Game

"Cap" Spiessmann's South Siders and the Stockyard Bulls battled through last night's postponed Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Boyle Street Park without reaching a decision, and the contest ended at that stage on account of darkness, with the score a 12-12 deadlock.

A sensational ninth inning finish climaxed a spotty exhibition of baseball, in which both teams had won and lost the decision two or three times. At the end of the eighth frame, with darkness rapidly coming on and the score tied, Umpire Drayton went into a huddle with the two managers to decide whether or not they should continue. The decision was in the affirmative, and right off the bat the South Siders notched a pair of tallies in their half of the ninth. It looked like the game was in the bag, then and there, but their pitcher, Bob Brown, hit a streak of wildness when the Bulls came to bat, walking four men and allowing a scratch hit, and the count was a draw before the side had been retired.

Plenty of Scoring

Throughout the contest, there had been plenty of scoring, with one team taking to lead only to lose it to the other and it see-sawed back and forth all the way. Both teams used a pair of hurlers during the game. "Hub" Thompson started on the hillock for the Bulls and was relieved in the sixth frame by George Dame, who pitched the remainder of the contest. "Lefty" Morrison went to the box for the Strathcona outfit, but was replaced at the start of the sixth canto by Brown, who went the rest of the route.

Gama Wants Match With Sonnenberg

GAMA
EH
AL DEMAREE

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher New York Giants)

There is at present two world's wrestling champions. One claimant is Gus Sonnenberg, the American wrestler, who recently defeated "Strangler" Lewis for the second time, and the other is Gama of India, who recently threw Stanislaus Zybszko in ten seconds at Patiala, India.

Gama, being over fifty years of age, is near the end of his career, while Sonnenberg is still young. All of which means these two will have to meet soon or not at all.

Gama was in his prime during the heyday of Hackenschmidt and Frank Gotch but never met either. He threw Dr. Roller, the American wrestler, in five and nine minutes respectively, in those days.

What a match Gama and Sonnenberg would make! The old world's and new world's champions.

I believe, however, that if conditions of the match were made equally favorable to both, Gama would win, regardless of his advanced age.

PLAY GETS UNDERWAY IN CALGARY MONDAY MORNING

Dr. M. M. Dunsworth, Present Edmonton and Provincial Champion, to Head Local Contingent—All Clubs Are Sending Representatives

THIRTY Edmontonians will carry the colors of local tennis clubs into the lists when the annual tournament of the Alberta Lawn Tennis Association gets under way at the courts of the Calgary Tennis Club on Monday. With such a representation of almost all the leading players from various city clubs it is hoped that a majority of the titles will be brought back.

The advance guard of the Edmonton contingent will move off Saturday morning by automobile and will be followed later on in the day by large delegations on the train and others raising columns of dust in autos.

Others plan to go on Sunday and all will be on hand when the official referee calls for play to start on Monday.

FAVORED TO RETAIN TITLE.

Heading the local delegation is Dr. M. M. Dunsworth, city and provincial champion, on whom the hopes of all Edmontonians rest for retaining his crown. "Doc" has been playing the best tennis of his career this year and is favored to retain his title. Unless some unknown star appears on the horizon there appears to be none to dispute his claim to premier provincial honors. However, you never can tell.

From the Civil Service Club there are going Mr. and Mrs. A. Ross McPherson, Mrs. E. E. Wood, Blanche Billing, Audrey Camroux, D[illegible] Belamy, Cecil Gould, Andrew A. Menzies, Alfred Blyth and Thomas Bellamy.

Glenora representatives will be Mrs. Vic Johnson, city singles title holder, who will seek to add the provincial crown to her list, Phyllis Primrose, Sybil Primrose, Josephine Carrigan, Fred O. Casselman, Ernest R. Watt, Finer Gunderson and Geo. H. Laycock.

In addition to Dr. Dunsworth the Patricia representatives will be Lindsay Carver, Fred J. Mitchell and F. Oxley.

The University Club will send a formidable squad, including Mrs. E. A. Howes, Kathleen Howes, Connie MacFarlane, Hastings McMahon, J. Arthur Stott, R. Staples and Stanley Moher.

A feature of the tournament will be the appearance on Saturday, August 10 in a series of exhibition matches of Dr. Jack Wright, Canadian singles champion and Willard F. Crocker, former Canadian singles champion and the pair Canadian doubles champions.

Dr. Wright and Crocker will appear in this city in a series of matches on the following Saturday, August 17.

From reports received here from Calgary the entry list for the tournament is one of the largest on record and a most successful event is looked for.

GOLF GOAT GETTERS

COPYRIGHT 1929 BY NEA SERVICE INC

By VERNE WICKHAM

There is one queer idea firmly established in many golfer's minds—they do not like to putt when their partner's ball is still in the cup.

Just where the idea came from, no one seems to know. It has very little reason for existing and yet it is a recognized mental hazard to have a ball or two in the bottom of the cup when you're putting.

After you hole out a putt, walk up and pick out your ball before your partner putts. He will appreciate it.

On one or two rare occasions a ball has been known to drop into the cup, hit a ball already at the bottom of the cup, and then bounce out. It has been known to happen once—and possibly twice—but you could putt balls into a cup lined with balls at the bottom, by the thousands, and not one of them would hit itself just right to pop out again, so really there is little reason for the idea and yet it exists.

You'll find all professionals doing it and in tournament play they never putt into a cup when there is a ball in it—so get in the habit of picking out the ball after you hole out. Be careful, of course, not to step on the line of putt.

And another thing, when you leave your ball in the cup you are depriving your partner of the [illegible] sound to a golfer's ear [illegible] of the ball in the bottom of the cup. Think that over!

Look Out, You Blonds

Max Bishop started out to be the best second baseman in the American League this year. He was making astounding catches, stops and throws and he was the life of the Philadelphia infield.

Suddenly he fell into a terrible slump and started to fight the easiest chances all over the lot. He said that something had happened to his eyes and that he was looking into a haze.

Connie Mack took him to a specialist and the doctor said that his eyes were going and that it wasn't from the sinus affection that almost ruined George Sisler.

Annual Yacht Race To Be Staged at Cooking Lake Sunday Morning

The annual sailing race for the Hudson's Bay cup will be staged by the Edmonton Yacht Club Sunday morning, at South Cooking Lake, according to S. Gosling secretary of the club. About 12 entries are expected and the race will start at the south end of the lake, racing to the north end and return. Keen competition is anticipated as the race is open to all boats and owners have been practicing since the start of the season, Mr. Gosling stated. Later on in the season the club plans to hold races for outboard motor boats, "sea fleas," a number of which are now on the lake.

Sheffield Wednesday Signs New Players

Sheffield wednesday of the English Football League, first division, are building up a strong forward line, for two notable captures have been made.

Jones is only 21, and stands 5 foot 8½ inches and weighs nearly 154 lbs.

Manitoba Football Referees Likely To Go Out on "Strike"

WINNIPEG, Man., August 3.—The great dissatisfaction manifest here since the Dominion Football Association championship, culminated last night at a meeting of the Manitoba Referee's Association, when it was virtually decided to "strike" and refuse to handle any further games in the city this season, unless guaranteed the support of local clubs, officials, associations and players.

A special meeting between the Manitoba Football Association executive and the Referee's Association has been called for today and unless the "whistle handlers" secure their "guarantee" no man will be assigned to handle the Westbrook and Hartz Manitoba championship replay this evening.

WHEAT TAKES ANOTHER DROP IN WINNIPEG

Closing Prices From 2½ to 2¾ Cents Under Friday's Final Quotations

By James Richardson & Sons Ltd.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 3.—Wheat declined sharply during early trading on the grain exchange today, and although brief rallies set in, closing prices were 2½c to 2¾c under Friday's finals, with October at $1.65⅛, December $1.60⅞ to ¾, and May $1.65⅝ to ½.

Holders appeared disinclined to carry their wheat over the long holiday week-end and liquidated. The market was not pressed energetically, but there was complete lack of support and values sagged easily. Commission houses and local interests sold at mid-day, depressing prices 3 cents to 3½, part of which was recovered in the final hour.

Broomhall cabled that Canadian wheat was not in much demand in Europe, as offerings from other countries at lower prices were freely made and native supplies were fairly plentiful.

Weather conditions in western Canada were much cooler during the past 24 hours, and the mercury appeared to be going dangerously near the frost line at some points. Many of the minimum temperatures were in the thirties. Cool weather and showers were forecast for the week-end. Rainfall yesterday was confined to southern Alberta.

Liverpool closed 5-8d to 1d lower.

Export trade was apparently confined to the United States, New York advices confirming good sales yesterday.

The cash wheat market was dull and featureless, local buyers taking odd cars at unchanged spreads.

In course grains there was fair demand for extra number 1 feed oats for domestic use, and good demand for low grade barley. Pit trades in all coarse grains was rather dull and the future prices continue to follow the action of wheat.

Wall Street Journal

By James Richardson & Sons

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Many new highs were made under the new leadership of high grade investment stocks like Atchison, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, National Biscuit and General Electric. American Telephones stimulating example started aggressive gains in the general utility list.

North American and International Telephone pushed into new highground, and People's Gas had another sensational up rush which carries it to the 400 level. Atchison's achievement of new record territory was the outstanding feature of this department, while N.Y. Central, New Haven and other representative issues of this class served spirited gains. U. S. Steel made its daily new high in the morning trading, turning somewhat reactionary after that on profit attached by the extensive character of its recent advance. However the industrial list had no difficulty in finding fresh favorites. General Electric flirted with 400 on its renewed upsurge into record territory, while Westinghouse also surpassed its previous peak and sharp advances occurred in special ties.

Like Simmons Co., National Cash Register and Gillette; while the turnover lightened somewhat in the afternoon and irregularity developed on week-end realizing the general list maintained a confident tone, and vigorous advances went ahead with unimpaired vigor in Consolidated Gas and American Telephone.

Bliss Letter

By James Richardson & Sons

NEW YORK, Aug 3.—Even allowing for the sweeping advances of the past week we would not advise liquidation of investment holdings of issues like General Electric, Westinghouse, American Telephone and Telegraph, Consolidated Gas or others in the same general classification.

It will be noted that the copper issues, or at least the leaders, Anaconda, Smelters, were particularly strong yesterday at the opening and at the close. We like the manner in which they are maintaining their market positions and while their advances may at this stage seem rather slow and somewhat hesitating we believe that long positions by all means should maintain.

The drilling site was located, the cellar dug, derrick timbers and machinery hauled, outhouses built, and the derrick erected all within 30 days, setting a record for this work in the field. Machinery is now being installed and the drilling program will be under way within a few days.

The site for the first well was chosen by W. S. Herron, pioneer oil operator of Turner Valley, whose phenomenal successes have marked him as one of the outstanding oil operators of the [illegible] field.

NOTE. Commencing on Monday, August [illegible] shop hogs will be cut $1.50 per [hun]dred instead of 80c per hundred, light and feeder hogs are being cut from $1.00 to $2.00 per hundred due to an over supply of this class of hog and buyers state that if any heavier receipts arrive a further cut will be made, so that farmers would be well advised to keep back the light end of the hogs as much as possible.

Sheep and lamb trading is none too brisk. Ruling prices remain unchanged and about steady with last week's close. Good to choice lambs are quoted at $9.00 to $10.00, yearlings at $7.50 to $8.00 and ewes at $4.00 to $6.00.

MONTHLY REPORT FROM THE EDMONTON STOCKYARDS, JULY, 1929

EDMONTON STOCKYARDS, Aug. 3.—Receipts: Cattle, 927; calves, 342, hogs, 2123; sheep, 68.

Total receipts for the month of July consisted of 5,855 cattle, 2193 calves, 9,033 hogs and 1,279 sheep. As compared to the corresponding month of last year this shows an increase of 751 cattle, 80 calves, 3,556 hogs and 442 sheep.

In the opening week of the month prices remained fairly steady with the close of June and salesmen found no difficulty in clearing their offerings quite readily. But, as the month progressed and heavy receipts started to come, buyers became indifferent and salesmen found it hard to move their offerings. In the third week of the month, trading was practically at a standstill as buyers were decidedly indifferent and bearish in their attitude. At this period prices broke from $1.00 to $2.00 per hundred on all classes of cattle and butchers, particularly medium and in-between kinds, were the heaviest losers. The closing days of the month, however, saw a slight improvement as far as trading was concerned. There was a little more activity noticeable and salesmen were able to clean up their offerings fairly well, but, at the considerably lower prices.

At the close of the month, good to choice steers were selling at $8.00 to $9.00 with very few of the top price coming, medium kinds from $8.00 down. Best heifers at the close of the month were selling at from $8.00 to $8.25, bulk of the good kinds at $7.50 to $8.00 and medium heifers from $7.00 down. Cows suffered the greatest decline as it took a really choice cow to bring $6.50, bulk of the good kinds selling at $6.00 to $6.25 and a few decent butcher cows sold as low as $5.75, medium to common cows going at from $5.50 down. Canners and cutters throughout the month sold at from $3.00 to $4.25, bulls at $5.00 to $5.75.

On the stocker and feeder market there was also a decline of from 50c to $1.00 per hundred but salesmen found it easier to move their offerings of stocker cattle. Bulk of the good stocker and feeder steers sold at from $7.00 down, odd exceptionally choice breedy kinds bringing $7.25 to $7.50; stocker heifers sold at from $5.00 to $6.00 and stocker cows at $4.00 to $5.25.

The calf market did not experience the same drastic break in the third week that the cattle market did but in the closing days of the month the calf market was decidedly draggy and calves were selling at 50c to $1.00 per hundred lower as compared to the sales that had been made throughout the earlier part of the month. In the closing days choice light vealers of a fancy kind made up to $10.00, but the bulk of the good to choice calves were selling at $8.50 to $9.50 and common to medium kinds at $5.00 to $7.00.

The hog market from the second week on showed decided signs of strength. Where, at the beginning of the month, selects were selling at $12.35 and thick smooths at $11.85, the closing two weeks of the month found selects selling at $13.50 and thick smooths at $13.00, all on a fed and watered basis. The closing ten days of the month saw a heavy run of light and feeder hogs and salesmen found it difficult to get an outlet for this class [illegible] buyers were cutting lights and feeders from $1.00 to $2.00 per hundred.

The sheep and lamb market experienced a very drastic break, particularly during the closing days of the month. Whereas at the beginning of the month choice lambs were selling up to $14.00, the closing days saw [illegible] choice lambs going over at [illegible] to $10.00 with yearlings at $8.00 to $8.50 and ewes at $4.00 to $6.00.

There was a decided improvement noticeable on the market at the closing days of the week particularly on butcher [illegible]. Buyers were somewhat keener in their demands and were not grading quite [illegible] were able to find [illegible] for [illegible] of their offerings and at the close of the week a [illegible] good [illegible] was experienced [illegible] indicated that [illegible] were [illegible] and [illegible] a [illegible]. Stockers and feeders [illegible] past week and [illegible] at unchanged [illegible]. Calves the [illegible] part of the week were inclined to be [illegible] draggy and [illegible] but an improvement [illegible] at the [illegible] days when buyers were not quite so [illegible] their [illegible].

"I'm Going to Sink You!"

By WILFRID EGGLESTON

A Schooner off Lunenburg, N.S.

SHOULD he sink the schooner?

Volleys from the six-pounders mounted on her forward deck would soon send the rum-runner below, with only a few fragments of splintered spar and a few kegs of Demerara rum left to drift before the wild December gale of snow that was blowing out of the northwest.

Or, more ruthlessly

A swift thrust from the powerful engines of the Margaret, a skilful twist of the wheel, and the steel prow would shear through the wooden beams of the Marion L. Mason and cut her into two helpless halves, flotsam of the Northumberland Straits.

She had been caught that afternoon with a cargo of rum, fresh from her illicit trade, her captain guilty of an indictable offence, liable upon conviction to a sentence of from one to ten years in jail.

The captain of the Margaret represented authority. He spoke in the King's name. He had just received special sanction from Ottawa to use force in compelling the Marion L. Mason to submit.

Three times the Marion L. Mason had refused to halt, though the crack of the gun from the Margaret's bow had warned her of her peril.

It was Captain Hubert Coffin, master of the Margaret, the senior ship in the Canadian customs fleet, who recalled for the writer, seated in his cabin on a bright April afternoon, just the other day, that strenuous incident of many months earlier.

It started when I asked him, after some casual comment on the sinking of the schooner I'm Alone off the coast of Louisiana:

"Has Canada ever had an I'm Alone incident?"

"No," he replied.

"A rum schooner has never been sunk by a Canadian patrol cruiser while attempting to evade capture?"

"Never, to my knowledge."

"There have been, I suppose, rum-runners who have defied your command to stop?"

Captain Coffin, as one familiar with the desperate venture of smuggling rum, and the type of man it breeds, smiled.

Then he told me the story of the Marion L. Mason

And since the Marion L. Mason is a typical rum-running schooner, it may help the inland reader if I explain that she is a two-masted sailing boat of 136 tons gross tonnage, 110 feet long, carrying a crew of eight or nine. She is equipped with Diesel oil engines, burning crude oil, and is capable of nine knots with sails furled, and with favorable winds and all sails set of two or three more.

Captain Coffin filled in the detail of the picture. The Margaret had come up through the Gut of Canso and was on her way through the Northumberland straits when a fresh easterly wind blew up and snow began to fall heavily; about noon the snow and the heavy seas were so menacing that he decided to anchor in Egmont bay until the storm blew over.

Defying Government Cruiser's Guns

ON her way in he sighted the Marion L. Mason, at anchor in territorial waters. The arrival of the Margaret was the signal for the schooner to start her engines, hoist sail, and put out to sea.

The Margaret, of course, gave chase. At 12.40 she came up with the schooner, and with a warning of her whistle gave the captain the order to stop in the King's name.

Captain Coffin explained that the Marion L. Mason kept on her course as though nothing had happened. He passed her, turned, came back, and repeated the procedure, this time emphasizing it with a blank shot from the gun. Still not the slightest response. The Marion L. Mason kept out to sea through the snow and the storm

Captain Coffin was in something of a quandary. The rights of the patrol fleet in the Northumberland straits had never been very clearly defined. Were they or were they not territorial waters? Before taking drastic action with the rebellious schooner, he decided to get express authority from Ottawa. He sent a code message by wireless

This took time. All afternoon the Margaret chased the rum-runner, waiting for the reply. The fleeing vessel rounded West Point and set a course north. The wind grew in fury and the snow continued to beat down. It came on dark, and there was still no word from Ottawa

At 5.26 p.m. the answer arrived. 'Use force, and seize the vessel,' was the gist of the message.

"I immediately came up to speaking distance," Captain Coffin went on. "I advised the captain to stop. I told him I had a wire from Ottawa authorizing me to use force. 'Put your men into lifeboats!' I shouted, 'because I'm going to sink you!'"

"Even that didn't budge him. I fired a blank shot from the gun across his bow. Then I fired four shots from our rifles, the first live shot clear, and the others in her sails."

"He kept on his way as before

"His refusal to put the crew off in the lifeboat had me guessing. I could easily have sunk her, but that meant certain loss of life, with such a sea on, in pitch black night. I was just as anxious to seize her as Ottawa was, perhaps more so, for when you spend months beating about these shores with never a bit of luck, though you know the rum-runners are putting it over you right and left, you don't care to let a rum-runner go when you stumble on him red handed. But if you're a sailor, and know what it means to ram into a schooner on a night like that, and drown eight or ten Nova Scotia fishermen turned smugglers, you hesitate, like I did.

"Then I figured out a scheme that might win us the schooner and not cost any life. I got a boarding party ready armed with rifles, hanging over the side of the boat, ready to jump. Then I put on full steam ahead with the idea of running alongside. I cut it so close that I sent the waves dashing over her from my bow, but every time, just as I was drawing alongside, she would turn hard over, and being shorter than us, she could turn much quicker, and she would veer off and get away

'Four times I tried it, and I was right on top of her every time, and a slip might have rammed and sunk her. But each time she veered off, and my boarding party couldn't jump

"The captain of the Marion L. Mason could see we meant business, but he was just as set as we were, and he held the cards

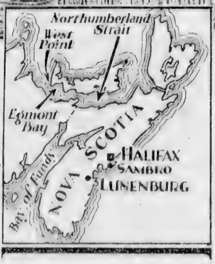
"It was getting harder all the time even to follow her. At last she gave us the slip, and though we cruised around all night we caught never a glimpse of her again."

The Margaret took up the chase again on the following morning, but the Marion L. Mason was never apprehended

When Patrol Craft are Powerless

SUCH strenuous incidents are rare because it is only when a customs cruiser stumbles by accident on a rum-runner in unlawful waters that a chase is possible

The every day work of the preventive fleet, such as the writer saw it during his brief cruise on the Margaret, is watchful waiting, with the dice loaded in favor of the rum-runner. Some day soon a thick fog will shut down on the scene, or a snowstorm will blow up, and when the curtain lifts again the rum-runner will be missing.'



On my second morning aboard a wireless message came to the Margaret from the Vigilant, the second largest boat in the Canadian patrol, asking her to take over watch of the D. D. Mackenzie, a three-masted schooner that had been for some days hovering just outside of territorial waters off Sambro, while the Vigilant put into Halifax for coal and supplies

A storm was brewing at the time, the official broadcast having predicted strong easterly winds, the worst trouble breeders known to the Nova Scotian coast

The arrival of the Margaret upset the calculations of the D. D. Mackenzie's captain. Apparently he concluded that a combination including two preventive craft—the Vigilant was still standing by—and a easterly gale was bad medicine, for almost immediately he put on full sail and set out for mid-Atlantic

The tableau when the Margaret arrived was rather significant

The centre of the stage was occupied by the big three-masted rum-runner. Off to starboard, like a bulldog with a bad temper, steamed the Vigilant. Dotted here and there on the horizon, were three or four smaller schooners hanging about. One black sailed tatterdemalion was familiar to Captain Coffin through earlier contact. "Customers!" he commented as he pointed them out. "Watch them make for shore now the smuggler has put out to sea!" This they wasted no time over doing

To an outsider like myself, the whole situation was ironic. Here was a rum-runner, well loaded, under surveillance of government cruisers. To prove intent, there were customers hanging around. The moment the cruisers could be given the slip, the illicit trade would proceed

Yet, so long as the D. D. Mackenzie stayed outside the 12-mile limit, the patrol craft were powerless to touch her! She might hover back and forth for days, supplying other boats at night, getting away in a fog and landing her cargo on a lonely island—yet, until the cruiser Margaret or one of her fleet could catch her actually engaged in transferring the liquor, or pick her up within territorial waters, she was inviolate

We followed the D. D. Mackenzie out to sea After all, this might be nothing more than a ruse to deceive the government boats. Captain Coffin was not taking any chances. If the schooner elected to make for Bermuda or Sable Island, the Margaret would afford her company, however unwelcome, for a few miles

We drove eastward, the breeze getting stiffer, and the seas higher. The D. D. Mackenzie, whatever her intention on setting out, decided to go through with the gesture. Her course seaward was steadily maintained.

When we were some seventy miles southeast of Sambro, Captain Coffin was satisfied that the intentions of the schooner were sincere. We left her, and turned back with the intention of picking up the Frances Smith, a suspected rum runner we had left hovering outside of territorial waters off Chebucto Head

Why Rum Runners Use Sails

DISHEARTENING work, this, like fishing without bait, or hunting deer with a revolver. The game is there, but you can't get within range. You can only parade up and down, frightening the timid, and exasperating the daring. Yet, even that has its value

"It breaks down their morale," Captain Coffin remarked. "They don't like to see us here Even if we can't lay a finger on them, we can queer their game, so long as the fog holds off Sometimes, with good weather, we wear them out, and force them to land and declare their cargo."

Just before the new year, 1929, Captain Coffin was successful in one of these manoeuvres

He had been keeping a close eye on the schooner Grace E. McKay, registered at Shelburne, which had been hovering off Halifax. As later came to light, the vessel had cleared from St. Pierre—the rum runner's base for the north Atlantic—on the 20th of November, 1928, with 1,040 cases of liquor aboard

The captain of the Margaret was told that the cargo had been intended for the American coast, but connections having been missed there the schooner came up to the Nova Scotian coast in the hope of better luck. Off Halifax, she was picked up by the Margaret, and the two settled down to the trench warfare of the sea each watching the other, each powerless to move until the other made a slip.

Through the dirty weather of late December the Margaret dogged the rum-runner just outside the 12-mile limit, off Halifax, sometimes a few miles east, sometimes west. It is these protracted vigils that call for sailing vessels When I first heard of the rum-running game, and of the money that some runners make, I inquired why the last word in power craft was not exclusively employed. So it might be if these delays were not to be faced. Schooners are so economical for the purpose of hovering. They can lay-to, in a gale; they can idle, in fair weather, at no expense, they can boost their speed by several knots in a fresh wind. If the engines fail or fuel runs out, they are not at the mercy of the Atlantic

So the Margaret watched the Grace E. McKay and the Grace E. McKay watched the Margaret. Then a gale blew up, and it became impossible to follow the schooner. She was left to her own devices while the Margaret anchored and laid by off Halifax.

But what the Margaret had begun the gale completed; the schooner ran out of provisions and water; there was no alternative but to seek the nearest port. While the Margaret rested at anchor off Halifax the Grace E. McKay was sighted making for port

The Margaret raised anchor and gave chase, but there was no fight left in the Grace E. McKay. She made no attempt to escape. Instead she wisely announced that she was going in to Halifax to declare her cargo. Captain Coffin, having sent his two officers aboard and learned that she was loaded with liquor, instructed the captain of the schooner to come alongside the Margaret when that boat had anchored in the dockyard. The first request of the schooner was for water, which was supplied by the Margaret Acting on instructions from Ottawa, Captain Coffin made no effort to press smuggling char against the Grace E. McKay. She was allow to report at customs, and her cargo was d with by the collector.

More often, the schooner wins out in t game of patience, and with the assistance o bit of dirty weather lands her cargo. At tim to these preventive officers following schoon back and forth until they elude their watch, whole process seems a farce

Say Law Needs More Teeth

"WE want more teeth in the law," the acti preventive chief at Ottawa said; a Captain Coffin of the Margaret outli what he felt from many years personal st of the problem the changes that would be nec sary before rum-running could be drastica checked off the Maritimes coast.

He would give far wider powers to the p ventive officer. He would abolish the "hov ing" clause, and make it lawful to examine a boat found off the Canadian coast which had reasonable cause to suppose was engag in illicit traffic. This would abolish the pr ent exasperating experience of standing by cargo of rum for days at a time, fully aw that she was waiting to slip into shore, impotent to act

As a touch of paradox, he would lessen t penalty. The prison sentence of one to ten ye that is inevitable following conviction of smug ing actually makes the task of reducing ru running more difficult, he says. The commun feeling against the sin of smuggling is not p erful enough. A jury of fellow fishermen, fellow citizens in any way interested in the s will not send a man to jail for a year or m because he has been caught red-handed at ru running. Such has been the experience of C tain Coffin and his fellow officers. Not seizure made last year by the Margaret was s tained in court although an appeal is still pe ing on one of them, and a single conviction m yet reward the Margaret's 1928 activities

It would be unfair to suggest, however, th the Margaret and her fellow-craft are not in t habit of producing tangible evidence of th value. Last year happened to be comparativ unfruitful. In one short period the previo year, the Margaret reported as follows

Two hundred and thirty-six packages liquor, value $4,000, seized ex-schooner Rona B., in the vicinity of Bay of Chaleur.

ELECTRIFYING OF BRITAIN PROCEEDS

Scheme for North Eastern Part of England to Cost $160,000,000

SAVING EFFECTED

Project for South West and South Wales Will Almost Complete System

With the preparation of the North-East England scheme, yet another step has been taken by the Central Electricity Board in electrifying Great Britain at a total cost of $160,000,000.

The scheme deals with an area of 5,050 square miles, and covers Northumberland, Durham and a part of the North Riding of Yorks. Although there are densely populated industrial areas—the population is approximately three millions—where electricity is in general use, there are also wide tracts of agricultural land at present unprovided with any electricity.

It is proposed to select six of the 15 existing public generating stations for operation by the Board, and to work five others under a temporary arrangement for a few years. Two of the permanent stations will be at Carville, and the others at Dunston, North Tees, Darlington and Sunderland.

A feature of the scheme is the proposed inter-connecting of the stations. By this means it will be possible to establish alternative routes to points of supply and give security against the risk of breakdown.

SAVING OF MILLIONS.

The main transmission system will comprise 102 route miles of line and five transforming stations. The secondary transmission system will involve a further ten transforming stations.

Of the 32 undertakings in the area, the scheme contemplates standardization of 25, at an estimated cost of $20,816,350. This work is to be done in stages and on a plan that will avoid any dislocation of industry during the change-over.

The cost of the erection of the transmission system is estimated at $9,532,375, of which $3,875,000 will be borne by the undertakers in extending certain existing stations. The saving in the next six years on capital expenditure is put at $10,204,790. Later the saving must prove progressively greater.

A scheme for south-west England, including South Wales, is to follow this one, after which there will be a small supplementary scheme for East Anglia.

In the early part of next year it is hoped to prepare a scheme for southern Scotland, followed by one for northern Scotland, when the whole of Great Britain will have been covered.

BODIES OF NUNS ARE EXHUMED

Taunton Council Purchase Convent and Transfer Bodies to Cemetery

A sequel to the purchase by Taunton Town Council for $50,000 of the Convent of Perpetual Adoration, Park street, Taunton, has been the exhumation of the bodies of 14 nuns interred in the private burial ground of the community since 1870, when the first death occurred.

The remains have been reinterred in the Roman Catholic portion of one of the town cemeteries.

A local undertaker supervised the task for which a Home Office order had to be obtained by the Church authorities.

The convent grounds are enclosed by a high wall, and every precaution was taken to prevent prying eyes from watching the melancholy work, which involved the making of a dozen new coffins.

COMMUNITY SPLIT UP.

The Reverend Mother and eleven nuns who resided in the convent until a few weeks ago have dispersed to other religious houses in England and France.

The buildings and chapel are to be converted into municipal offices, and by utilizing a portion of the land a much-needed road improvement can be made.

WHITE-HAIRED MAN HELD UP SERVANTS OF LADY CURZON

Disturbed When in Kitchen of Newmarket Residence Makes Get-Away

NOTHING MISSING

Uses Torch To Disconcert Pursuer and Trip Him in Woods

A burglar, carrying a loaded revolver, held up the butler and other servants at Grove House, Newmarket, the residence of the Marchioness Curzon of Kedleston, and escaped after firing several shots.

About 2 a.m. the butler heard footsteps downstairs. He roused six other manservants and they went down to the kitchen.

A footman switched on the light and found himself looking in the barrel of a revolver held by a white-haired, elderly man, who carried a torch in his other hand.

The footman was ordered to put up his hands and told to step backwards out of the kitchen. Holding the other servants at bay, the man then escaped by the kitchen window and ran off in the direction of the racecourse grand stand.

All the servants gave chase, and the chauffeur had almost caught the intruder when he wheeled round, shone the torch in the chauffeur's face, and tripped him up.

Entering a small wood the man turned and fired shots in the direction of the pursuers, who gave up the chase.

Aroused by the disturbance in the house, Lady Curzon came out of her room, but by this time the intruder had escaped. Nothing is missing from the house, but it is believed that this is the first time Lady Curzon has taken her famous jewels to Newmarket.

The police, however, do not think that the burglar was aware of this.

A robbery occurred a few hours earlier at a house in the district, when silver and other articles were stolen.

POWERFUL MAN RAN AMOK IN FACTORY

Called Victims Behind Pillar and Struck Them Down

One man was killed and three were seriously injured under mysterious circumstances in a factory at Manchester.

Another man is in the Royal Infirmary suffering from throat wounds alleged to have been self-inflicted.

This man, James McGough, of Reather street, Manchester, is employed at the works of the Premier Waterproof and Rubber Co.

It is stated that he was working in a room where there were several pillars and was seen to pick up a bar of iron about an inch thick. Then he called a man to him.

SHOUTS HEARD.

Nobody saw what happened in the shadow of the pillars, but it is thought that McGough called each man behind the pillars in turn and then hit them on the head with the iron bar.

Not until the shouts of the injured men were heard above the noise of running machinery was the affair discovered.

According to another man McGough was working on the same truck as Holden, the man who was killed, with whom, it is stated, he was on terms of friendship.

He arrived back at work from lunch and spoke to Holden quite normally a few minutes before the alleged attack.

McGough is said to be a big, powerfully built man aged between 50 and 60. It is understood that he was once a warder.

The men injured were John Partington, John Allan and Thomas Forshaw. The dead man is Charles Holden, of Chapman street.

PAISLEY OFFICIAL HAS DISAPPEARED

Defalcations in Town Chamberlain's Office Amount to Over $50,000

Information has been given by the Town Clerk of Paisley that a clerk in the Town Chamberlain's office had disappeared. It was stated that defalcations amounting to at least $50,000 had been discovered.

The police are searching for the clerk.

He was at work on Monday, but during the day inquiries were made regarding some of the entries in his books, and he left the office a little later. His hat was still on a peg when he left, and no attention was paid to his departure, as it was thought that he had gone to another department. Since then, however, he has not been seen.

Further books are to be examined. The man is married.

ACQUIT JACKSON OF MURDER OF WIFE "MADAME X"

Judge Considered Circumstantial Evidence Was Very Strong

VERDICT CHEERED

Jury Took Half An Hour To Find Husband Not Guilty

Thomas Henry Jackson, aged 37, was found not guilty of the murder of his wife, "Mme. X.," at the Swansea Assize Court, after a lengthy trial.

Jackson's evidence and cross-examination lasted four and a half hours. The judge's summing-up occupied one hour and forty minutes. The jury took half an hour to consider their verdict.

The result was received in the crowded court with cheering and clapping.

The demonstration came chiefly from the women who packed the gallery. The cheers were taken up by hundreds of people in the street who had gathered earlier in the day to watch Jackson's arrival.

Jackson, whose father was in court, smiled faintly when he heard the verdict.

Jackson was accused of murdering his wife, Kate Jackson, in their bungalow, Kenilworth, at the Mumbles, on Feb. 4.

Mrs. Jackson became known as "Mme. X." after a case at the Old Bailey, when a trade union official of her acquaintance was sentenced to five years' imprisonment for embezzlement.

"MYSTERIES."

Mr. Justice Wright, summing up, said the circumstantial evidence against Jackson was very strong.

"There has been a great deal of talk about mysteries connected with Mrs. Jackson, but I can see none, at any rate since 1910, when she left the man Le Grys. Since then all her movements are known.

"No one knew why the unfortunate Harrison (the man sentenced at the Old Bailey) paid her money. The anonymous letters in the case are like many others, but the people who write anonymous letters are generally of a very different type from people capable of executing a murder.

"If any stranger did murder this woman it must have been done following a deliberate scheme and of set purpose. I have heard no evidence which would indicate that Mrs. Jackson had any enemies likely to do her harm.

"I can see no one coming and committing this murder and then slipping off.

"Was Jackson's conduct that of an innocent or a guilty man? Why were the neighbors not asked in at once after the tragedy? Why were not the police called? Various explanations have been made, but to me these questions remain unanswered.

"DIFFICULT TO BELIEVE."

"It is difficult to believe Jackson when he said that he did not know the matter was so serious. His different explanations do not agree. But are any of them consistent with the attitude of an innocent man whose wife had been attacked and severely injured.

"It is a most extraordinary thing that there was found in Jackson's house a tire lever, not in the open, but in a position of concealment, where it was almost incredible that it could have got by accident.

"There is no evidence of any secret enemy. That is merely a surmise or possibility, and against that there is all the evidence which the prosecution has produced."

Dowager Duchess Pays Tribute To Son For Help and Comfort

The Dowager Duchess of Abercorn, of Park street, W., an intimate friend of Queen Alexandra, and one of the four Duchesses who carried the canopy over her at her coronation, has left $15,845.

She bequeathed all her property except her clothing to her son, Lord Claud Nigel Hamilton, "whose devotion and kindness has been my greatest help and comfort through so many tragedies and dark days," requesting that he would give mementoes to those whom she may have indicated.

The tragedies mentioned in the will were family losses in the war.

The late Duchess, whose husband died in 1913, was deeply distressed by the loss of a son in action and by the war deaths of many near relations.

Her younger daughter died in 1917. Towards the end of the war came a [illegible] ing daughter, was lost when the Leinster was torpedoed in the Irish Channel.

Proposed And Was Accepted While Speeding at Sea

The speediest lover in Britain has just wooed and won his girl here after a rollicking romance at 40 miles an hour.

He was Algernon Elstrode, a holiday-maker at Brighton from Canning Town, who decided to "pop the question" in a manner so thrilling that the lady of his heart would be too breathless to say "No."

Without dropping a hint as to his intentions, he hired a speed-boat and escorted the girl to the landing-stage. Here, unaccompanied except by the driver, they stepped aboard the craft and were off.

When well out to sea, with the spray spattering over them, and the foam rising on either side, Elstrod asked the excited, laughing, bewildered girl to be his wife!

A SALTY KISS

When they disembarked, ten minutes later, wet but radiantly happy, the couple were engaged.

"Good man!" said Elstrode, dropping the surprised pilot a ten-shilling note. "You're better than all the Venetian gondoliers rolled together!"

"To tell you the truth," said Elstrode, in an interview, "I was a bit shy of proposing, for I only met Eileen a few weeks ago.

"Eileen said 'Yes' right enough, but it was a very salty kiss with which we sealed the bargain."

CHINA COMBINE AT STOKE-ON-TRENT

Twenty Firms Unite in Scheme For Mass Production

A large financial syndicate has completed the purchase of 20 of the principal china factories at Longton, Stoke-on-Trent, which is the home of the china trade.

The firms will be merged into a combine, to be known as the English China Corporation, Ltd., and will have a capital of not less than $5,000,000.

The names of the firms concerned are not yet available. It is expected that more firms will later join the new combine.

Part of the scheme is to be the erection of a super-china factory at Longton, where pottery will be manufactured on mass production lines.

A feature of the new combine will be the establishment of a research department in connection with the chemical and art sides of the industry.

The new combine will have a central London showroom, and will be personally represented in the Dominions, the Colonies, and on the Continent.

CAR BACKS OVER SIXTY-FOOT CLIFF

Dives on to Beach at Bridlington With Six Passengers

A saloon car with six occupants was turning on South Cliff road, Bridlington, when it backed over the cliff. It fell 60 feet on to the sands below.

Two of the occupants, T. Child, of Dewsbury, and Miss Turner, of Halifax, were injured. The others—including Mrs. Child—escaped unhurt.

The car struck a supporting wall about 4ft. above the sands and retained its upright position.

FORGED STAMP FOR ROYAL COLLECTORS

Two English penny stamps were sold for $85 at Harman's Bond street auction rooms.

These stamps were printed for four young Royal collectors, King Edward VII. (then Prince of Wales), the Duke of Connaught, the German Emperor, and Princess Clementine of Belgium.

They were Government "forgeries." The Post Office had no specimens of the English black penny stamp so they used a plate of the red penny to produce them.

The stamps were printed on the wrong paper, with the watermark upside down and presented to the young philatelists with a sheet of 240 each. It was from one of these sheets that the pair sold the other day came.

YOUNG GIRL HOAXES DOCTORS TO OPERATE

Southwark Guardians were informed that a girl aged 15, chargeable to them as an inmate at Connaught House, Winchester, through a pretence of acute agony which deceived three doctors, was operated on by them for appendicitis.

The doctors found that the girl was in normal health. [illegible] Newington Poor Law Institution.

CRICKET PRODIGY HAS AMBITIONS OF ENGLISH ELEVEN

Hobbs is Watching His Bowling Feats With Interest

Although he is only 14, Alfred Avery, of Cyprus place, New Beckton, gives promise of developing into a first-class cricketer.

His record has attracted the attention of Jack Hobbs, who is watching his cricketing career with interest.

Alfred is a left-handed, slow to medium break bowler; his average during his first season, when he was only 12½, was 1.63; in his second season it was 2.015.

He has played for Winzor School, New Beckton, and represented his district in the London schools matches against teams from Eton, Harrow and the Public Schools. He has won one county and two district caps.

He became cricket champion of his school by scoring 51 runs out of 95 and taking five wickets for eight runs.

He is now playing in a senior team and although he has only been in two matches this season, in one he took two wickets for 12 runs and in the other one for four.

"He is very ambitious," writes his father, "to become one of England's cricketers in years to come. The son of working class parents, he is a descendant of Sir Robert Walpole's family."

"BUSMAN DATAS" HAS GREAT MEMORY

Can Remember Details of Sporting Events Nearly Half Century

Remarkable memory feats are now being performed by Jock Neill, a London General Omnibus Company's driver, attached to the Putney Bridge garage.

His latest feat is to repeat the names and constituencies of the new House of Commons.

"My husband has the most wonderful memory in the world," said Mrs. Neill to a press representative. "He never forgets anything that he really wants to remember.

"And when it comes to sport he knows more than a newspaper: He can give you the names of all the Derby winners for nearly 50 years back. He knows the winning teams for at least 40 football finals.

"His mates call him the 'Busman Datas,' and I don't wonder."

The bus route he usually works is No. 39. His conductor is very proud of him, but passengers, in these days, cannot talk to the driver, and so Jack Neill is a lucky fellow!

REWARD SOUGHT FOR MOSQUITO WARRIOR

"The Ross Institute desires to place before the Government and the nation its obligation to Sir Ronald Ross for his services to the Empire and to humanity."

Thus Sir Charles McLeod, the chairman, announced at the annual meeting at Putney of the Ross Institute and Hospital for Tropical Diseases.

The Institute (he went on) trusted that a capital sum would be raised by the Ross Award Fund to relieve Sir Ronald from all anxiety in the future for those dependent on him, and as a recognition of his great work.

Sir Ronald's scientific war against the mosquito is said to have saved more lives than were lost on the battlefields of Flanders. Although his researches have depleted his resources, no financial grant has ever been made to him.

RUBBER FACTORY IS PREY TO FLAMES

Three factories were involved in a big blaze in High street, Stratford East. The flames could be seen for miles and dense smoke penetrated through neighboring streets.

The fire broke out in the early evening, when it was seen that Messrs. Mason's rubber factory and two other factories were alight.

Acrid fumes from the burning rubber forced spectators away. Traffic was held up, trams were turned round and motor-cars were diverted.

A roof fell in amid a shower of sparks and several firemen [illegible] extinguished but the premises were almost gutted.

Irish Castle Of Earl of Antrim Is Destroyed By Fire

Glenarm Castle, the historic residence of the Earl and Countess of Antrim, has been destroyed by fire.

The outbreak was first noticed by a member of the household staff, who was attracted by a strong smell of burning wood coming from a small bedroom on the top storey of the east wing.

The alarm was raised, but the fire had gained a strong hold, and all efforts to subdue it failed when the roof collapsed, and the firemen directed their energies in an attempt to save the servants' quarters in the south block. In this they were successful.

Furniture valued at over £700 was destroyed in one bedroom in the main building.

The Earl and Countess of Antrim were not in residence.

Among the treasures believed to be in the castle, parts of which date from 1636, were two treasure chests taken from the wreck of an Armada galleon that went ashore on the rocks near Glenarm.

SMALL PRICE FOR MAZER BOWL SALE

Cherished Relic of Saffron Walden Almshouses is Disposed of Visitors to Christie's when the sale of the historic Saffron Walden mazer bowl took place, were disappointed when the hammer fell to the $14,500 bid of Mr. Oliver, a London dealer.

The property of the Trustees of the King Edward VI. Almshouses at Saffron Walden, it was confidently expected in many quarters that a high figure would be reached, and only the most dispirited applause greeted the fall of the hammer.

Made of polished maple-wood, and with a silver rim bearing the rare London hall-mark for 1507, the bowl has remained in the possession of the Almshouses for over 400 years.

There was strong local opposition to its sale, and the decision to send it to Christie's was only ratified last month.

Pepys mentions it in his famous Diary, and, describing his visit to Saffron Walden in 1659, states that "they brought him a draft of their drink in a brown bowl, tipt with silver."

This is by no means a record price for a mazer bowl, one of more elaborate design having realized $50,000 at auction about two years ago.

ONE-LEGGED MAN SAVES MANY LIVES

Frees Pony Tying-Up Motor Traffic Inside Closing Gates

Prompt and plucky action by a one-legged man probably saved an L. M. S. train from disaster at a level crossing near Wellingborough.

Arthur Smith, landlord of the Volunteer Inn, Wellingborough, who has only one leg, stumbled up to a runaway pony which was holding up motor traffic at the level crossing, the gates of which were closing for a passenger train already in sight.

Mr. Smith struggled with the pony and got it away from the gates just in time for two cars wedged on the crossing to get to safety.

The gates closed as the train came thundering by.

Had Mr. Smith failed two cars and the pony and trap would have been smashed by the train.

Fire Chief Served For Half Century in Warrington Brigade

Ex-Superintendent F. H. Turner, who was for 32 years chief of Warrington Fire Brigade, has died at the Fire Station House, aged 95.

He joined Warrington Fire Brigade in 1861, and in 1873 was promoted sergeant. Six years later he was appointed deputy superintendent. In 1882 he was appointed superintendent, and on completing half a century of service in 1911 Mr. Turner went to London to receive from the King His Majesty's Police Medal. The Corporation presented him with an illuminated address. He retired from the superintendency in 1914.

ARCH FORGER IS GIVEN TEN YEARS

Leader of Gang Previously Convicted is Caught at Last

CLEARS OFFICER

Woman Promises to Give Him New Start in Australia When Freed

Described by Sir Ernest Wild, K.C., the Recorder, as an "arch-forger, the greatest forger at large for some time," James Brady, 41, a bookmaker, was sentenced at the Old Bailey, London, to ten years' penal servitude.

Brady, who is also known as Harvey, was charged with forging cheques for £4,000, £210 and £106.

Mr. Percival Clarke, prosecuting, said Brady was one of the most expert forgers known to the police. In November last, two men named Chandler and Roberts, and a young woman named Maud Gordon, were sentenced at the Central Criminal Court in connection with the same charge.

Brady disappeared and the police have been hunting for him ever since.

ARMS FOUND IN ROOMS.

At the rooms he had occupied in Stoke Newington were found two pistols, some ammunition, a life-preserver, and the paraphernalia of a forger.

Detective-Inspector Yandell said Brady was well-educated and was in the banking department of a well-known London house for 18 months until he was 20, when he received his first sentence, one of 20 months' imprisonment for forgery.

In his rooms were found tracings of signatures, and evidence of his having obtained £1,518 17s. by forgeries during the last 12 months.

It was stated on behalf of Brady that on the expiration of his sentence a woman had promised to pay his passage to Australia, to give him a fresh start in life.

Alluding to an allegation made at the trial of other members of the gang in November last, Brady, from the dock, said: "The statement that I bribed the police officer to protect me is a lie."

Passing sentence, the Recorder said it was apparent that Brady was the guiding intelligence of the gang who had already been dealt with.

Detective-Inspector Yandell said he appreciated very much the manliness of Brady in refuting the allegation made against him (the officer) by one of the men sentenced last November.

ART DEALER WAS FAR TOO SANGUINE

Thought He Could Obtain Heirlooms of Earl of Wemyss

Arthur Ruck, aged 41, an art dealer, of Berkeley street, W., was indicted at the Old Bailey for obtaining a cheque for £15,000 from Messrs. Colnaghi, art dealers, New Bond street, W., by false pretences.

Mr. Oliver, K.C., prosecuting, said Ruck had the best possible reputation, and was a man to whom the transactions would be a small one in the ordinary way.

Last April he entered into negotiations with Messrs. Colnaghi for the purchase of four pictures, including a Gainsborough and a Ruysdael, in the possession of the Earl of Wemyss. They were heirlooms, but they could be sold with the consent of the trustees. The Earl was in bed with a broken leg at the time, and the negotiations were carried on on his behalf by Lady Angela Forbes.

LADY ANGELA FORBES.

On April 22 Mr. Ruck told Messrs. Colnaghi he was in a position to sell four pictures for £15,000, and they handed him a cheque for that amount.

As the pictures were not delivered, Messrs. Colnaghi's solicitors asked for an explanation, but Mr. Ruck, very foolishly, instead of attending to the matter and returning the money, seemed to have gone on chasing about the country after Lady Angela Forbes, trying to pull off the deal. Lord Wemyss had never agreed to sell the pictures.

Messrs. Colnaghi came to the conclusion that Mr. Ruck could not return the money, and after taking advice they felt bound to institute proceedings. The money had now been repaid. In these circumstances it seemed to be idle to ask the jury to convict.

"There is no question of compounding a criminal matter," said Mr. Oliver, "but it is our acknowledgment that no crime was ever committed because there was no intention to defraud."

SANGUINE AND CARELESS.

The Recorder (Sir E. Wild, K.C.): You think Ruck was too sanguine?

Mr. Oliver: Yes, and grossly careless.

Mr. Norman Birkett, K.C., defending, said that the whole difficulty had arisen because Mr. Ruck was too sanguine. He thought he had an arrangement whereby he could fulfil the contract with Messrs. Colnaghi. That was ill-founded, as the events proved.

Sir E. Wild: Your client honestly thought he had an arrangement with Lord Wemyss?

Mr. Birkett: Yes.

Mr. Birkett said he was satisfied that Messrs. Colnaghi acted in good faith.

Sir E. Wild said Mr. Ruck left the court without the slightest stain on his character.

POLICEWOMAN WAS 'ASKING FOR TROUBLE'

"It is risky for a policewoman to take a drunken man into custody," said the Marylebone magistrate, when a policewoman said that she arrested a laborer because he was drunk and incapable.

Magistrate: Why did you do this?

Policewoman: Because I was called and a male constable could not be found.

Magistrate: You were asking for it. A policewoman was very roughly handled at Paddington Station by a drunken man. It is better to leave it [illegible] and the defendant went quietly.

FOR THE YOUNG PEOPLE

THE HIGH DIVER

FRANK McKAY swam out to the raft and pulled himself out of the water.

"'Lo, Art," he called out to his friend, who was already there. "You've not going to dive from 'way up there, are you?"

The raft at Bliffin's Beach had three platforms, and Art Munroe was standing poised on the springboard of the highest, ready to dive into the water.

"This isn't high," he yelled, as he took the leap.

Splash!

His hands hit the water evenly, his head followed and then his body.

"Did I keep my feet together?" he asked, joining Frank on the float.

"Yes—it was a great dive!"

For the next moment, both boys were silent. Then Art looked at his playmate and said:

"Frank, how is it that you never dive?"

"I do."

"Yes—but only from the bottom springboard. I mean from the middle or the top."

"I'm afraid to," replied Frank. "Although I wouldn't admit it to everybody."

"What is there to make you afraid? It's not like jumping head first into a stone quarry."

"I know it's only water, but still, I can't seem to get up enough courage to try it."

"If you only did it once—," pleaded Art. "You'd like it after that, I'm sure you would."

Art Munroe could not understand why his chum did not overcome his fear of diving. It wasn't because Frank was afraid of the water. He was the best junior swimmer on the beach. Nor was it because Frank was a "scared cat." Art knew him too well to believe that.

"Think of all the fun we could have!" he said.

"We can have fun lots of other ways," Frank answered. "Let's swim out to the channel buoy and back. Hello? What's that next to the bathhouse?"

He was looking at a tall iron framework that looked like a radio tower.

"Haven't you seen that before? It's the new diving platform."

"The new diving platform! You don't mean to tell me that somebody dives from the top of that tower, do you?"

Art laughed at his friend's amazement.

"Of course, I do."

"But gosh—! That's almost a hundred feet high!"

"Not quite," laughed Art. "I was talking with Mr. Bliffin yesterday and he told me it was only forty-five feet from that platform to the ground."

"Well, even that is pretty high. But what does he dive into? A net?"

"No. He dives into water."

"It's in a tank right underneath the platform," laughed Art.

"But they couldn't find a tank deep enough!" cried Frank.

"I can see you don't know much about high diving," retorted Art, good-naturedly. "The water in the tank is eight feet deep."

For a moment Frank was speechless.

"You mean—he jumps forty-five feet into a tank of water only eight feet deep?"

"Yes," was Art's answer. "And if I'm not mistaken, it is time for the two o'clock performance. Let's swim ashore and watch him."

He dove neatly into the water, followed by Frank, whose dive was neither graceful nor effective, for, as always, he floundered around for a few strokes before he could straighten himself out for his favorite style of swimming, which was the overhand crawl.

"C'mon up to the tank," he said, as he walked in from the water. "I want to take a good look at it."

Directly underneath the tower the boys glanced up at the platform. It looked higher than ever. Then Frank climbed up the side of the tank and peered over the edge.

"It doesn't look deep," he reported, "but I'm going to test it anyway."

He came down, looked around for a piece of string, tied a pebble on one end of it, then lowered it down into the tank. When the pebble hit bottom, he pulled it up again and stretched out the wet string so he could see how long it was.

"Just about eight feet," he said. "Well, all I can say is, the man who does it must be crazy!"

A crowd had begun to gather, and at exactly five minutes before two, the high diver came out of the bath house and walked toward the tower.

Frank looked and gasped.

The high diver, the person who leapt from the dizzy heights into what was scarcely more than a bathtub of water, was not a man at all! It was a girl!

Frank watched her as she gracefully climbed the ladder that had been built up the side of the tower. A band was playing and some man was telling the crowd how high and deep everything was. Then she poised for a second on the edge of the platform, waved her hand gaily at the people below, and dived.

As she dived through the air, Frank held his breath. Midway between the top and the bottom, she did a somersault. He gasped. Just above the water she did the prettiest toe touch that Frank had ever seen and plunged out of sight in the tank. Frank's heart almost stopped beating.

"I didn't believe it was possible!" he said to Art, as they walked slowly back to the water's edge. "She came out of the tank almost as soon as she went in, and she didn't even touch bottom!"

"Of course not!" replied Art. "Nobody ever touches bottom. You have to arch your back when you get in the water and that brings you to the surface again."

Just before they went into the water again they were surprised to hear somebody say:

"Are you going out to the raft?"

It was the high diver!

"Y—yes," stammered Art.

"I wish I could go," she said, wistfully.

"Why don't you?" asked Frank, in amazement.

"I can't swim that far!" replied the girl. "You may think that's funny, but it's the truth, just the same."

"Why don't you try?" said Frank. "I'd stay near you so I could help you if you needed me."

"All right," replied the high diver.

She ran into the water and began to swim. She went very slowly and before she reached the raft she was very tired; but she got there, just the same.

"See?" said Frank, "You never know what you can do until you try!"

"C'mon," she said, after a rest, "Let's take a dive."

Frank glanced up anxiously at the third platform. His new acquaintance followed his look with her eyes.

"It isn't very high, is it?" she laughed.

"Not after seeing the tower, it isn't," he replied, making a wry face at Art. "But I'm not much of a diver."

"Oh, c'mon," she urged. "You can try it, anyway."

So for the first time in his life Frank McKay went out to the end of the top springboard and dived into the water. It wasn't a perfect dive by any means; but nevertheless he came up smiling.

"It's a great feeling," he said. "And I didn't touch bottom at all!"

His chum, Art Munroe, smiled happily. He watched Frank dive again and again. "Keep your feet together!" scolded the girl. "Hold your arms straight!"—"Don't bend your knees that way!"

Art knew that under such expert instruction, the best junior swimmer on the beach would soon become the best junior diver.

"Nope," commented Frank, when Art mentioned it to him one day. "Say the third best. I'll never be able to dive forty-five feet into eight feet of water. She comes first. And, Art, you're not such a terrible diver yourself!"

The JUNIOR COOK

MELON SALAD

Chill a fine ripe cantaloupe.

Drop the small melon ball in French dressing, cover tightly and put in the ice box.

Five minutes before serving time, drain the balls from the dressing, arrange nests of shredded lettuce and drop the balls on top, allowing several for each person to be served. For a pretty color effect use two or more kinds of melon choosing among honey dew, cantaloupe, watermelon and nutmeg melon.

Serve with tiny strips of toast or cheese wafers.

B'RER BEAR

THERE is something comical about the common black bear of this country, whether he tries to look funny or not. The whimsical twinkle of his eye shows that he is endowed with a sense of humor, and the tendency of the corners of his mouth to turn upward, looks as if he is just about to burst out laughing. No two-legged comedian ever invented a more absurd shuffle, than this four-footed one, and it makes not the slightest difference to him whether he has an audience or not; and he never forgets to be funny, even when way off in the woods by himself. His shuffling, flat-footed walk is about as droll as anything could be, and he seems to get fun out of everything that comes along.

He can amuse himself for hours at a time, by teasing a toad frog, and keep it hopping; or by pushing a terrapin along trying to make it open its shell; and he can have the time of his life going rough-shod through tall broomstraw, flushing a swarm of grasshoppers, and grabbing them by the paw-ful as they try to escape.

The bear is an entirely different fellow from the typical bear of the story books we used to read. When let alone, he is timid and inoffensive, and had much rather say "Boof," and then run away, than to stay and fight. If wounded or cornered, he can put up a fight, that no animal need be ashamed of. A mother bear defending her cubs becomes a perfect cyclone of teeth and claws, side-swiping with lightning-like swiftness, and slapping with the most unexpected reaches of arms and legs.

But if unmolested, the bear is more ready for a romp or a rough-and-ready tussle, than for a fight. The cubs can hardly stop playing long enough to eat; and from morning until night, they are cutting up all sorts of didos—boxing, wrestling, turning somersaults and teasing their good-natured mother. She lets them tumble over her, pull her ears, bite her heels, seldom objecting to their rough play.

The favorite sport of the cubs is to stand on their hind feet and cuff each other like trained boxers, or locking arms, wrestle until one goes down, when the victor makes a great show of biting the other's throat, with much growling and snorting.

Black Bear Cub

At times when the mother has to leave them at home, she starts them up a tree, by slapping and cuffing; and when they have clambered up to the big limbs, she tells them in bear language what she will do to them if they dare to come down, before she comes back. And if we are to believe what hunters and trappers tell us, they never fail to mind her. When old enough, she gives them a great treat, by taking them with her on her rambles, and teaches them all the things that bear children ought to know. She shows them how to turn over rocks, and lick up the panic-stricken ants underneath, before they have time to hide in their tunnels; she shows them which kind of berries are good to eat, and which kind should be left untasted; she teaches them if they see a movement in the grass, to slap down a paw as quick as possible as it may be a mouse or a mole, and a mouse or a mole is not to be sneezed at.

If in the course of her wandering, she comes across the trail of a man, she calls the cubs and lets them get a good whiff of the hated smell, then she says "Hoof"-"Woof" as loud as she can, and then dashes head-long through the bushes, her claws throwing up a cloud of dust, mixed with pebbles and sticks, in her frantic haste.

This is an object lesson the cubs never forget, and the next time they get an inkling of that smell, they know exactly what it is and go while the going is good. Strange as it seems, the eyesight of a bear is poor, and at a little distance he cannot tell a man from a stump, that is, if the man does not move. But the bear's hearing and sense of smell are so keen, that they will go drifting away to the densest thickets, and the roughest hillsides, long before the intruder is in sight. Even when the bear is out on the serious business of getting a dinner, his sense of humor will cause him to go out of his way, into frightening a bull frog into taking a dive, evidently with no other purpose than the fun of seeing it jump, and landing in the water with a splash. As the frog disappears, the bear will turn his head to one side, and wrinkle his nose with pure delight; he would certainly laugh right out if he could.

Bears have a lot of curiosity, and notwithstanding their natural timidity, if they are certain that their presence is not known, they have been seen to steal up, under cover, and watch with the deepest interest, all the movements of a man fishing or picking berries. People in the woods are more often studied by bears than they imagine. In captivity, bears are not so much to be pitied as some other animals, as their playfulness and sense of humor enables them to get endless fun and amusement out of anything thrown in their cage, such as an old shoe or hat.

And then, they get a lot of fun watching the people who come to watch them.

CHAIR SEATING WITH INNER TUBES

WHEREVER an automobile is kept discarded inner tubes are certain to accumulate. The "Handy Boy" or the thrifty home worker who instinctively rebels against throwing anything away which seems to have potentialities for usefulness, is usually open to suggestions for their use.

Let us consider seating porch chairs for the suburban home, the camp or the Scout club room with inner tubes, for no other material will stand the hard usage and exposure to rain more efficiently.

Beginning at the valve and using a pair of sharp scissors cut a spiral strip 3" wide around the tubing and its entire length, finishing the ends square across as suggested. This will give a strip 3" wide and about 20 feet long, depending upon the size of the tube. It will require four or five tubes to seat an ordinary chair. Spread rubber cement lightly over the inside of one strip, fold each edge as at 2, then as at 3, leaving about 3" at one end to make the joint with the next piece.

Fasten the end at a with several tacks to the under side of the seat rail, carry the folded strip across the front, stretching it about 4" to each foot in length which will reduce the width of the strip to about ¾". Pass over the top to b, under the rail and across to c, being careful to stretch the rubber evenly. Piece b to c will be slanting. When nearly at the end of the first piece join the second piece with cement, making about 1½" lap. Fold over as at 2 and 3 and continue to the back legs at d, cross under and around the leg at e f and begin to weave. Note that the weave is "herring-bone," or over two and under two, excepting at edges when it may be either under or over one or two as may be necessary to make the weave uniform. The first weave under the seat from g to h will be slanting as at b c and should be woven by the same method as the top. Continue the weave until the seat is completed. A little study of the seat shown will indicate the method of weaving which is not at all difficult after it is started. It may be necessary to adjust the strips to fill the seat in width. The rubber must be stretched at uniform strain and not allowed to slip back; another pair of hands will help here if a small clamp or other device to hold the rubber is not available.

Such a seat should be both water and wear proof for several years, the sun being its greatest enemy. This may be minimized by using a cushion that covers it completely. Also if the seat is given a good sponging in alcohol occasionally the rubber will be flexible much longer. In any case it will be a comfortable seat for a long time.

SWINGING

I'VE a new rope swing in the old apple tree
And I go so high that I can see
The roof of the house and the tall church spire
And I could see the church if I could go higher.

I play that I'm Lindy aboard my plane
And I soar way up in the clouds again,
Sometimes I think I'm near the sky
It seems as if I go so high.

I look in the nests the birds have made
And see the wee eggs newly laid;
Then turn my plane toward earth once more
And land beside my mother's door.

THE GOOD QUEEN OF HEARTS

THE Queen of Hearts was making tarts all on a summer's day,
When looking up she saw a little maid not far away,
The child was crying: "Good Queen, let me come and live with you!
I'm one of those poor, hungry kids that's living in a shoe.
I only get a little broth without a bit of bread
And mother whips me every night before I'm sent to bed."
"Dear, dear!" the Queen exclaimed: "I'd surely be without a heart
To send you off. Here's milk and bread and you shall have a tart."

THE GRAMMARLOG BOY

Some folks possessed of knowle scant
Will speak of "Uly-sees" S. Gra
Instead of calling him "U-lyss-e
They rhyme the name with "tr
please,"
Or, what is worse, "unruly fleas,
When all should know it rhym
with "misses."

When warring foes have had th
day,
An "Armistice" comes into play,
And in the word, as in fighting,
The "Army" holds the emphasis
It is not right to say "Ar-miss";
'Tis "Army-stis" of which I writing.

The Consuls from a foreign land
As "Coun-sels" many people bran
strangers).
But from the wisest men I glean
That they say "Con-suls" wh they mean
These international arrangers.
